Judge Raps Mental Experts For Letting Maniacs Loose

Accepts Indictment of Peakes, Then Assails Those Responsible

New York, July 28 (AP)—Judge Saul S. Streit today accused mental experts of foisting "dangerous maniacs on the public with the most dire consequences."

Accepting the first degree murder indictment of Bayard Peakes in the Columbia University slaying of a young girl, Streit said in an angry statement:

"No action whatever was taken to commit this defendant or to treat him, but the veteran-maniac was permitted to roam at large on an unsuspecting public and to kill this innocent victim."

Peakes, claiming the key to eternal life, shot to death Eileen Fahey, pretty 18-year-old stenographer. She happened to be the first person he met when he invaded Columbia's campus seeking revenge because his weird theories were not accepted.

Taken to Task

The judge's statement took harshly to task both state mental instutions and those of the Veterans Administration.

Streit, who won nationwide attention as a hard-boiled critic of "sordid commercialism" in college sports, said the 29-year-old Peakes had a long record of insanity and doctors described his condition as "fraught with danger."

"But the Veterans Administration records disclose that the killer was continuously insane for several years before the homicide and known to be dangerous but permitted to be at large in utter disregard of the public safety.

"Such rank negligence and indifference promoted further inquiries. My investigation discloses that this case is only one of many in recent years weherein officials of mental institutions have foisted dangerous maniacs on the public with the most dire consequences.

Wholly Inadequate

"I am also of the opinion that the state law and the Veterans Administration regulations are wholly inadequate to safeguard the welfare of the public."

"In the interest of avoiding a repitition of such wanton murders and other vicious crimes in the future, an imperious sense of duty

Town of Ulster Signs for Water

About 85 Per Cent Now on List in Favor of New District

Owners of approximately 85 per cent of the property in the proposed water district in the town of Ulster, north of Kingston, have signed the petition asking that the town board of the town of Ulster establish a water district. The petition is shortly to be presented to the town board for action.

Before the petition is presented to the town board, the sponsors of the water district desire to give everyone in the proposed district a chance to sign.

When the representatives called at some homes the owners were absent. Anyone who has not signed the petition, and desires to, may contact W. E. Davis, Guyton street, phone 2223-W, and they will be visited. Davis is chairman of the tentative water district as the representative of Ulster Hose Company No. 5, which has been sponsoring the plan.

The majority of the assessed valuation lying within the proposed district must be represented on the petition to the town board in order that action may be taken. The committee with approximately 85 per cent of the assessed valuation represented, feels it has a sufficient amount to present the petition with a request that the town board establish a water district and take the necessary legal steps toward formation of the district but the petition will be held open a short time to give others an opportunity to sign.

The petition may be ready for submission to the town board at its next regular meeting in August or at a specially called meeting.

Brien McMahon Dies in Hospital

Connecticut Senator Had Spinal Ailment and Operation

Washington, July 28 (AP)—Sen. Brien McMahon, 48, a Connecticut Democrat with a passion for peace and a key role in the nation's atomic energy program, died today of a spinal ailment.

Death came at 10:10 a. m., EST., with members of his family at his side in Georgetown Hospital, where the senator went in June for an operation.

Illness prevented his campaigning as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. Friends from Connecticut gave him 16 votes anyhow at the Democratic national convention last week. From his hospital bed, McMahon ordered his name withdrawn.

McMahon was a brand new senator in 1945 when the first atomic bomb devastated Hiroshima. Awesomely impressed, he decided this new force must be leashed to save civilization, and dedicated his life to that goal.

Headed Atomic Group

Despite his relative inexperience, he became chairman of the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee—the voice of Congress on all atomic affairs, the highest lay authority on the subject.

He first won fame as chief of the justice department's criminal division. In 1933, he personally moved into bloody Harlan county, Ky., during a war between coal mine operators and union labor.

McMahon was shot at from ambush but unhurt. Two of his key witnesses were slain and the homes of two others were dynamited, but the New Englander restored law and order after spectacular trials for terrorism.

Brief Storm Takes Four Lives; Three Persons Missing

Small Craft Are Upset in Harbor in Gale Which Lasted Only 20 Minutes

Salem, Mass., July 28 (AP)—A brief, violent line squall with hurricane wind gusts up to 85 miles an hour smashed through this famed old seaport yesterday leaving four known dead and at least three missing. The victims were in small craft capsized in the harbor.

The squall, accompanied by a driving rain, lightning and hail, struck a dozen Essex county communities, capsizing small craft, knocking out power and communication lines and uprooting trees and felling telephone and power poles.

One of the missing was reported seen going under water and failing to resurface. The others were not accounted for last night when the coast guard halted its searching operations until this morning.

200 Craft Capsize

Some 200 craft capsized in Salem harbor which bore the brunt of the 20-minute storm. The coast guard and private motor launches rescued about 100 persons in small boats.

More than 30 persons were listed as missing at one time but they were tracked down during the day at their home in scattered sections of Massachusetts or in refuge on the numerous islands in the harbor.

The Coast Guard pointed out last night it is possible that the present missing list of three could increase since boat owners, when renting out a boat, only take the name and address of the person doing the renting and not of the rest of the persons accompanying him.

Police identified the dead as John Boisvert, 66, and Isidore Leboeuf, 57, both of Lowell; Kenneth Drew, 60, of Lynn, and Samuel Weiner, 56, of Malden.

Missing Persons

Missing were Edwin Nowak of Danvers, presumed dead; Robert Savageau and Harrison Cole, both of Beverly.

Twelve of 20 privately owned airplanes at Mountain Field municipal airport in Beverly were torn from their moorings, swept into the air and demolished.

The weather bureau described the disturbance as a very unusual

More Than Thousand Take Train Ride to Mountains

The once-famed Rip Van Winkle Flyer of the former Ulster and Delaware Railroad rolled again Sunday as 1,046 persons including almost 500 from Kingston enjoyed a railroad trip thru the picturesque Catskill Mountains as a feature of Kingston's Tercentenary activities.

A touch of bygone days was added to the excursion as masked horsemen "held up" the train on the Kingston flats near the Beatty farm, "captured the mail," and were finally chased into the distance by the hard-riding "sheriff's posse."

There were 16 cars on the Rip Van Winkle Flyer—12 of them arriving from New York and the metropolitan district, reaching Kingston about noon for welcoming ceremonies at the Greenkill avenue siding where the famous engine 999 and modern equipment of the New York Central Railroad has been on display for a week. Standing before the 999, Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk addressed the metropolitan excursionists, as cameras clicked and interested people climbed in, out and over the railroad equipment. Superintendent H. B. Tucker of the river division of the New York Central; William T. Gaynor, publicity director of the railroad, Albert H. Kurdt, secretary of the Kingston Chambers of Commerce; Harry Rigby, chairman of the Tercentenary Committee; and Henry P. Eighmey, chairman of the Kingston Model Railroad Club's participation in the exhibit and trip, all addressed the assembled excursionists.

The train left Kingston station at 1:30 p. m. for the Catskill Mountains and Stamford—destination of the revived Rip Van Winkle Flyer. It was shortly thereafter that the masked "Bandits" haulted the train and were finally driven off by the mounted "sheriff" and his men. This bit of pageantry was the Lowlands Riding Club's gift to the Tercentenary event.

During the trip members of the Kingston Model Railroad Club, stationed in each car of the train, related bits of history of the Ulster & Delaware line and pointed out various locations of interest along the right of way. Amazement was heard from many of the passengers as the 16-car train, hauled by two large diesel locomotives on the head end and two more pushing, crawled up the heavy grade into Pine Hill and then around the famous horseshoe curve until the summit was reached at Highmount station — the location of Grand Hotel, the

Goes Back To Aff irs At Capital

McKinney Says Battle to Be for 60 Days Starting Labor Day for Democrats

Truman to Speak

'Big Four' Will Stump for Candidate, Says Chairman

Chicago, July 28 (AP)—Governor Adlai E. Stevenson returns today to Springfield and a tumultuous welcome from the Illinois capital, to prepare himself for the role of Democratic standard bearer in the 1952 presidential campaign.

He will pick up, but only temporarily, the reins of the job he had repeatedly said he wanted for four more years—governor of Illinois.

Then he will resign to devote himself to the role "I did not want?"—candidate for the President of the United States.

The Democratic nominee spent the weekend conferring with party leaders on campaign plans. Among them was Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama, whom the Democratic national convention chose as Stevenson's running mate as candidate for vice-president.

Frank E. McKinney, Democratic national chairman, told reporters the party high command had agreed on a "hard-hitting campaign of no more than 60 days." It will begin on Labor Day.

'Big Four' to Speak

McKinney said the party's big four speaking team will be President Truman, who advised the chairman, "I am at your disposal," Vice-President Alben Barkley, an unsuccessful candidate for the top spot on the 1952 ticket, Stevenson and Sparkman.

The chairman said the team will carry the campaign into every part of the nation, and President Truman has promised a repetition of his 1948 whistle stop speaking tour that salvaged victory out of generally predicted defeat.

Besides Sparkman and McKinney, other Stevenson visitors Sunday included Governor Paul A. Dever of Massachusetts, Averell Harriman, Senator Robert Kerr of Oklahoma and Mrs. India Edwards, vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Dever Is Confident

Dever, his own state's "favorite son" candidate for the presidential nomination, told reporters he believes with Stevenson the Democrats can carry Massachusetts, Rhode Island and "maybe Connecticut," and other New England states.

Harriman and Kerr, defeated candidates for the Democratic nomination, pledged Stevenson their support. The Oklahoma senator said Stevenson agreed the campaign should stress the importance of agriculture in the American economy, and Kerr predicted a Democratic victory in November.

It was disclosed that Dever had persuaded Harriman to withdraw in favor of Stevenson after the second ballot at the convention Friday. A reliable source said Harriman planned to delay his withdrawal until the sixth ballot, but the Massachusetts governor persuaded him that the delay might enable Barkley or Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee to win.

Mrs. Edwards said her discussions with Stevenson concerned women voters.

King's Ouster Hailed as End Of Corruption

Cairo, Egypt, July 28 (AP)—The head of Egypt's powerful Wafdist party voiced jubilant support today for the country's new strong man, Maj. Gen. Mohammed Naguib Bey, and hailed his ouster of King Farouk and his promise of a relentless nationwide cleanup of "bribery and corruption."

The sweeping praise for Naguid came from Mustapha El Nahas Phasha, the party head whom Farouk ousted from the premiership after last January's disastrous fire riots in Cairo and who returned early today from a European holiday.

A high Wafdist source said the party, Egypt's largest and the sweeping victory in the last general elections, would support Naguib and his new premier, Aly Maher Pasha.

Naguib, himself, was at the airport to embrace Nahas Pasha when he arrived with Wafdist Secretary Fuad Serag El Din Pasha.

"I thank God our people now are entrusted to our valiant army commander," Nahas declared, adding, "I pray to God to grant success to the task undertaken by General Naguib."

Called 'Savior'

Later, after a conference with Naguib at Egyptian army headquarters, Nahas called Naguib the "savior of the country."

Nahas Pasha's high praise for Naguib and his plans took on particular interest for observers here, since much of the corruption which the new regime has sworn to root out and punish has been charged in the past to members of the earlier Wafdist administration.

The violently nationalist Wafdists, too, were chiefly responsible for Egypt's ordering the British out of the Suez Canal zone and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Britain's refusal to comply set off prolonged and frequent clashes and anti-British rioting last winter, culminating in the January torch outbreak.

The new cabinet, meanwhile, moved back to Cairo and Naguib sternly warned that he and Maher Pasha would "meet with armed force if necessary any attempt at demonstrations or disorders." He warned, too, that foreign interference would not be tolerated.

Sails for Italy

As the cabinet quit the summer capital at Alexandria for Cairo, the ousted monarch sailed toward Italy in the royal yacht Mahroussa. With Farouk were his six-month-old son, now Egypt's King Fuad 2nd, Farouk's teen-age second wife Narriman, and his three daughters by a previous marriage.

One newspaper said the baby king would be returned to Egypt when he is seven years old, the age at which Moslem mothers traditionally lose control of their sons. The cabinet, meanwhile, temporarily held the royal powers pending creation of a regency council.

The Nile kingdom generally rejoiced at the departure Saturday night of fat, playboy Farouk.

Though Farouk's choice of a home in exile was not announced, he was expected to heard first for Italy and later go to France. There were also reports he might go eventually to the United States.

In Naples, an official at the Egyptian consulate said the royal yacht may dock there tomorrow morning unless Farouk "changes his mind," but the official would not elaborate on this.

Wherever he settles, the pleasure-loving ex-king could be expected to live in the fabulous luxury with which he surrounded himself during most of his turbulent 16-year reign.

His wealth has been estimated at from 50 million to 100 million pounds (143½ million to 287 million dollars), with a goodly share of it invested abroad. One high government source said Farouk had agreed on abdicating to surrender part of his fortune in Egypt to the state.

San Francisco, July 28 (AP)—Some 6,000 AFL sailors today were expected to vote acceptance of a five per cent pay increase and end the 63-day west coast shipping strike. Shipowners and sailors representatives late Saturday agreed tentatively on a settlement of the tieup, which cost the industry an estimated 20 million dollars.

Hurley Family Is Hurt in Accident

Lehtonens Are Taken to Binghamton Hospital Conditions 'Fair'

Three Hurley residents were injured late Friday night in an automobile accident near Binghamton, according to information received here during the weekend.

They are Andrew Lehtonen, 42, his wife, Helen, 38, and their daughter, Adele, nine.

Taken by Broome county sheriff's department ambulance to Binghamton City Hospital, their conditions were listed as "fair" on the hospital's latest available condition report issued Saturday noon.

Traveling with the Lehtonens were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence D. Wright, and their daughter, of Kingston, who were not hospitalized and who have returned to this city.

Lehtonen Has Skull Fracture

Local friends have been informed that Andrew Lehtonen, a Hurley fire commissioner, received a fractured skull, Mrs. Lehtonen suffered from brain concussion and an injured ankle, and that their daughter was treated for shock.

The accident occurred on the Vestal Highway (Route 17) on the outskirts of Binghamton about 11:15 p. m. Friday. The highway is a four lane, divided highway.

Deputy Sheriff David Foulke reported that the two families were riding in an automobile driven by

Jones and Laughlin Group Votes to Go Back, but Protest

Pittsburgh, July 28 (AP) — A strike threat in the aluminum industry put a new roadblock today in the path of America's economy as the nation's steel mills gained speed in their drive to recover from a 55-day walkout.

Contract negotiations between the CIO United Steelworkers and the Aluminum Company of America broke off in Washington with the union threatening to strike tomorrow at 9 p. m. (EST).

Alcoa said the union is making wage demands greater than those granted by the steel industry. The union replied with a statement that the USW is out to level off pay differentials in the nine different plants in which it represents workers.

Workers Return

Pittsburgh, July 28 (AP)—Steelworkers stepped-up the pace of their back-to-work movement today but a few still grumbled over the wage settlement reached with big steel.

The undercurrent of dissatisfaction leaked from a 5,500 member CIO United Steelworkers local at Jones & Laughlin's South Side Pittsburgh plant.

James McLaughlin, president of Local 1843, said his group voted during the weekend to return to work but under "protest." He

Open Door Whisks Woman From Plane at 12,000 Feet

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, July 28 (AP)—The door of a Pan American Airlines stratocruiser blew open in flight yesterday and the sudden draft sucked an American-born woman out of her seat and to her death in the Atlantic ocean 12,000 feet below.

The victim was identified as Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Westbrook Capellaro, daughter of Mrs. Bessie Machris of Los Angeles, Calif., and wife of Emilio Capellaro, a banker of Rome, Italy. She was accompanying Capellaro on a business trip.

(In Los Angeles, a spokesman for the woman's family said her mother knew she had planned to marry Capellaro but did not know the ceremony had taken place. He said the woman talked by telephone with her mother on Saturday and "did not say anything at that time about being married. I am sure she would have told her mother if she were." He identified the victim as the widow of U. S. Air Force Col. Robert B. Westbrook, who was shot down during World War 2.

The plane door blew off shortly after the takeoff from Rio de Janeiro, when the aircraft was 27 miles out on a flight to Montevideo, Uruguay. Passengers and crew members said they did not see the woman disappear. Capellaro, sitting next to her, said he was smoking and not looking in her direction.

The woman's seat, next to a window and just forward of the door, was twisted and part of the cloth lining the ceiling of the cabin was ripped off. The plane returned to Rio and three Brazilian Air Force planes were sent to search the area of the disappearance.

Three similar accidents have been reported in recent years. In 1947 the plastic observation dome of a Trans-World Constellation blew out 18,000 feet over the Atlantic ocean and George B. Hart, of Sag Harbor, N. Y., was drawn out. On Feb. 11, 1950, Pan American Steward John Harris, of New York, tried to close the accidentally-opened door of an airliner 8,000 feet above New York's Long Island and hurtled to his death from the pressurized cabin.

The same day the door of an Eastern Air Line plane suddenly burst open over Tampa Bay, Fla., the plane's steward, Marc Fisher-Galati, grabbed the door handle to close it, but as he was pulled partially out, hooked his right leg around a chain and held on desperately for 10 minutes until the plane was brought into St. Petersburg, 2,000 feet below.

Eisenhower Talks With Drive Chief

Nominee Goes to Denver After Brief Rest at Mountain Ranch; Sees Nixon

Statement Given

Nixon Says General, He Discussed Campaign Organization

Denver, July 28 (AP)—Back at his campaign headquarters after a 10-day vacation, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower stowed away his fishing gear and turned full attention today to pressing his bid for the presidency.

The Republican nominee returned here last night from the Rocky Mountain cattle ranch near Fraser, Colo., where he went for a rest a few days after the Republican national convention.

First on the general's agenda today was a conference with his newly appointed political chief of staff, Gov. Sherman Adams of New Hampshire. Eisenhower plans to spend most of the rest of the week conferring with other party leaders.

Yesterday, the general's final day at Fraser, was devoted only in part to relaxation. A good share was given over to discussion of campaign plans with his vice presidential running mate, Sen. Richard M. Nixon of California.

Drives to Ranch

Nixon drove to the ranch from Denver early in the morning and —before the serious talking got started—received his first lesson in how to cast for trout. His tutor? The GOP presidential nominee himself, an expert fisherman.

Before the conference, Eisenhower and Nixon joined in predicting a Republican victory in November over the ticket the Democrats selected in Chicago last week—Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois as the presidential candidate and Sen. John J. Sparkman of Alabama for vice president.

Nixon said he was confident "we are going to have the victory for Gen. Eisenhower that the country needs."

Seated on a bench alongside the California senator, Eisenhower interrupted and told his 39-year-old running mate:

"You mean victory for the party and not just for me, my boy — and, more important, victory for the country."

Organization Discussed

After the conference in Eisenhower's rustic cabin, Nixon issued this statement:

"The general and I discussed campaign organization and itinerary, as well as strategy and tactics and several of the major issues.

"The general and I agreed that this shall be as intensive a campaign as we can make it. We expect to conduct a fighting campaign on the issues and the facts, and to bring our case to the people.

"When the campaign gets underway, we shall visit as many of the states as possible, including states in the south."

Hence the nomination of Alabama's Sen. Sparkman to run with Stevenson on the Democratic ticket apparently had no effect on plans of the Republican candidates to invade the south—traditionally solid for the Democrats.

Both Strike at Democrats

Over the weekend, Eisenhower and Nixon both slapped at the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket as one committed to all-out defense of the Truman administration record.

"The Democratic party has named its candidates and offers them to the country on a one-plank platform: Defense of the entire administration record," Eisenhower said in a statement Saturday, a few hours after the Democratic convention adjourned.

A bit later, Nixon arrived in Denver and told a news conference Stevenson and Sparkman might be new faces on the national political scene but that they owed allegiance to "the same Old Deal" of Truman policies.

Nixon drove to the ranch from Denver early in the morning and —before the serious talking got started—received his first lesson in how to cast for trout. His tutor? The GOP presidential nominee himself, an expert fisherman.

Before the conference, Eisenhower and Nixon joined in predicting a Republican victory in November over the ticket the Democrats selected in Chicago last week—Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois as the presidential candidate and Sen. John J. Sparkman of Alabama for vice president.

Nixon said he was confident "we are going to have the victory for Gen. Eisenhower that the country needs."

Seated on a bench alongside the California senator, Eisenhower interrupted and told his 39-year-old running mate:

"You mean victory for the party and not just for me, my boy — and, more important, victory for the country."

Organization Discussed

After the conference in Eisenhower's rustic cabin, Nixon issued this statement:

"The general and I discussed campaign organization and itinerary, as well as strategy and tactics and several of the major issues.

"The general and I agreed that this shall be as intensive a campaign as we can make it. We expect to conduct a fighting campaign on the issues and the facts, and to bring our case to the people.

"When the campaign gets underway, we shall visit as many of the states as possible, including states in the south."

Hence the nomination of Alabama's Sen. Sparkman to run with Stevenson on the Democratic ticket apparently had no effect on plans of the Republican candidates to invade the south—traditionally solid for the Democrats.

Both Strike at Democrats

Over the weekend, Eisenhower and Nixon both slapped at the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket as one committed to all-out defense of the Truman administration record.

"The Democratic party has named its candidates and offers them to the country on a one-plank platform: Defense of the entire administration record," Eisenhower said in a statement Saturday, a few hours after the Democratic convention adjourned.

A bit later, Nixon arrived in Denver and told a news conference Stevenson and Sparkman might be new faces on the national political scene but that they owed allegiance to "the same Old Deal" of Truman policies.

Judge Raps Mental Experts For Letting Maniacs Loose

Town of Ulster Signs for Water

About 85 Per Cent Now on List in Favor of New District

Owners of approximately 85 per cent of the property in the proposed water district in the town of Ulster, north of Kingston, have signed the petition asking that the town board of the town of Ulster establish a water district. The petition is shortly to be presented to the town board for action.

Before the petition is presented to the town board, the sponsors of the water district desire to give everyone in the proposed district a chance to sign.

When the representatives called at some homes the owners were absent. Anyone who has not signed the petition, and desires to, may contact W. E. Davis, Guyton street, phone 2223-W, and they will be visited. Davis is chairman of the tentative water district as the representative of Ulster Hose Company No. 5, which has been sponsoring the plan.

The majority of the assessed valuation lying within the proposed district must be represented on the petition to the town board in order that action may be taken. The committee with approximately 85 per cent of the assessed valuation represented, feels it has a sufficient amount to present the petition with a request that the town board establish a water district and take the necessary legal steps toward formation of the district but the petition will be held open a short time to give others an opportunity to sign.

The petition may be ready for submission to the town board at its next regular meeting in August or at a specially called meeting.

Accepts Indictment of Peakes, Then Assails Those Responsible

New York, July 28 (AP)—Judge Saul S. Streit today accused mental experts of foisting "dangerous maniacs on the public with the most dire consequences."

Accepting the first degree murder indictment of Bayard Peakes in the Columbia University slaying of a young girl, Streit said in an angry statement:

"No action whatever was taken to commit this defendant or to treat him, but the veteran-maniac was permitted to roam at large on an unsuspecting public and to kill this innocent victim."

Peakes, claiming the key to eternal life, shot to death Eileen Fahey, pretty 18-year-old stenographer. She happened to be the first person he met when he invaded Columbia's campus seeking revenge because his weird theories were not accepted.

Taken to Task

The judge's statement took harshly to task both state mental instutions and those of the Veterans Administration.

Streit, who won nationwide attention as a hard-boiled critic of "sordid commercialism" in college sports, said the 29-year-old Peakes had a long record of insanity and doctors described his condition as "fraught with danger."

"But the Veterans Administration records disclose that the killer was continuously insane for several years before the homicide and known to be dangerous but permitted to be at large in utter disregard of the public safety.

"Such rank negligence and indifference promoted further inquiries. My investigation discloses that this case is only one of many in recent years wherein officials of mental institutions have foisted dangerous maniacs on the public with the most dire consequences.

Wholly Inadequate

"I am also of the opinion that the state law and the Veterans Administration regulations are wholly inadequate to safeguard the welfare of the public."

"In the interest of avoiding a repitition of such wanton murders and other vicious crimes in the future, an imperious sense of duty

Brief Storm Takes Four Lives; Three Persons Missing

Small Craft Are Upset in Harbor in Gale Which Lasted Only 20 Minutes

Salem, Mass., July 28 (AP)—A brief, violent line squall with hurricane wind gusts up to 85 miles an hour smashed through this famed old seaport yesterday leaving four known dead and at least three missing. The victims were in small craft capsized in the harbor.

The squall, accompanied by a driving rain, lightning and hail, struck a dozen Essex county communities, capsizing small craft, knocking out power and communication lines and uprooting trees and felling telephone and power poles.

One of the missing was reported seen going under water and failing to resurface. The others were not accounted for last night when the coast guard halted its searching operations until this morning.

200 Craft Capsize

Some 200 craft capsized in Salem harbor which bore the brunt of the 20-minute storm. The coast guard and private motor launches rescued about 100 persons in small boats.

More than 30 persons were listed as missing at one time but they were tracked down during the day at their home in scattered sections of Massachusetts or in refuge on the numerous islands in the harbor.

The Coast Guard pointed out last night it is possible that the present missing list of three could increase since boat owners, when renting out a boat, only take the name and address of the person doing the renting and not of the rest of the persons accompanying him.

Police identified the dead as John Boisvert, 66, and Isidore Leboeuf, 57, both of Lowell; Kenneth Drew, 60, of Lynn, and Samuel Weiner, 56, of Malden.

Missing Persons

Missing were Edwin Nowak of Danvers, presumed dead; Robert Savageau and Harrison Cole, both of Beverly.

Twelve of 20 privately owned airplanes at Mountain Field municipal airport in Beverly were torn from their moorings, swept into the air and demolished.

The weather bureau described the disturbance as a very unusual

Hurley Family Is Hurt in Accident

Lehtonens Are Taken to Binghamton Hospital Conditions 'Fair'

Three Hurley residents were injured late Friday night in an automobile accident near Binghamton, according to information received here during the weekend.

They are Andrew Lehtonen, 42, his wife, Helen, 38, and their daughter, Adele, nine.

Taken by Broome county sheriff's department ambulance to Binghamton City Hospital, their conditions were listed as "fair" on the hospital's latest available condition report issued Saturday noon.

Traveling with the Lehtonens were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence D. Wright, and their daughter, of Kingston, who were not hospitalized and who have returned to this city.

Lehtonen Has Skull Fracture

Local friends have been informed that Andrew Lehtonen, a Hurley fire commissioner, received a fractured skull, Mrs. Lehtonen suffered from brain concussion and an injured ankle, and that their daughter was treated for shock.

The accident occurred on the Vestal Highway (Route 17) on the outskirts of Binghamton about 11:15 p. m. Friday. The highway is a four lane, divided highway.

Deputy Sheriff David Foulke reported that the two families were riding in an automobile driven by

Jones and Laughlin Group Votes to Go Back, but Protest

Pittsburgh, July 28 (AP) — A strike threat in the aluminum industry put a new roadblock today in the path of America's economy as the nation's steel mills gained speed in their drive to recover from a 55-day walkout.

Contract negotiations between the CIO United Steelworkers and the Aluminum Company of America broke off in Washington with the union threatening to strike tomorrow at 9 p. m. (EST).

Alcoa said the union is making wage demands greater than those granted by the steel industry. The union replied with a statement that the USW is out to level off pay differentials in the nine different plants in which it represents workers.

Workers Return

Pittsburgh, July 28 (AP)—Steelworkers stepped-up the pace of their back-to-work movement today but a few still grumbled over the wage settlement reached with big steel.

The undercurrent of dissatisfaction leaked from a 5,500 member CIO United Steelworkers local at Jones & Laughlin's South Side Pittsburgh plant.

James McLaughlin, president of Local 1843, said his group voted during the weekend to return to work but under "protest." He

Connecticut Senator Had Spinal Ailment and Operation

Washington, July 28 (AP)—Sen. Brien McMahon, 48, a Connecticut Democrat with a passion for peace and a key role in the nation's atomic energy program, died today of a spinal ailment.

Death came at 10:10 a. m., EST., with members of his family at his side in Georgetown Hospital, where the senator went in June for an operation.

Illness prevented his campaigning as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. Friends from Connecticut gave him 16 votes anyhow at the Democratic national convention last week. From his hospital bed, McMahon ordered his name withdrawn.

McMahon was a brand new senator in 1945 when the first atomic bomb devastated Hiroshima. Awesomely impressed, he decided this new force must be leashed to save civilization, and dedicated his life to that goal.

Headed Atomic Group

Despite his relative inexperience, he became chairman of the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee—the voice of Congress on all atomic affairs, the highest lay authority on the subject.

He first won fame as chief of the justice department's criminal division. In 1933, he personally moved into bloody Harlan county, Ky., during a war between coal mine operators and union labor.

McMahon was shot at from ambush but unhurt. Two of his key witnesses were slain and the homes of two others were dynamited, but the New Englander restored law and order after spectacular trials for terrorism.

More Than Thousand Take Train Ride to Mountains

The once-famed Rip Van Winkle Flyer of the former Ulster and Delaware Railroad rolled again Sunday as 1,046 persons including almost 500 from Kingston enjoyed a railroad trip thru the picturesque Catskill Mountains as a feature of Kingston's Tercentenary activities.

A touch of bygone days was added to the excursion as masked horsemen "held up" the train on the Kingston flats near the Beatty farm, "captured the mail," and were finally chased into the distance by the hard-riding "sheriff's posse."

There were 16 cars on the Rip Van Winkle Flyer—12 of them arriving from New York and the metropolitan district, reaching Kingston about noon for welcoming ceremonies at the Greenkill avenue siding where the famous engine 999 and modern equipment of the New York Central Railroad has been on display for a week. Standing before the 999, Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk addressed the metropolitan excursionists, as cameras clicked and interested people climbed in, out and over the railroad equipment. Superintendent H. B. Tucker of the river division of the New York Central; William T. Gaynor, publicity director of the railroad, Albert H. Kurdt, secretary of the Kingston Chambers of Commerce; Harry Rigby, chairman of the Tercentenary Committee; and Henry P. Eighmey, chairman of the Kingston Model Railroad Club's participation in the exhibit and trip, all addressed the assembled excursionists.

The train left Kingston station at 1:30 p. m. for the Catskill Mountains and Stamford—destination of the revived Rip Van Winkle Flyer. It was shortly thereafter that the masked "Bandits" haulted the train and were finally driven off by the mounted "sheriff" and his men. This bit of pageantry was the Lowlands Riding Club's gift to the Tercentenary event.

During the trip members of the Kingston Model Railroad Club, stationed in each car of the train, related bits of history of the Ulster & Delaware line and pointed out various locations of interest along the right of way. Amazement was heard from many of the passengers as the 16-car train, hauled by two large diesel locomotives on the head end and two more pushing, crawled up the heavy grade into Pine Hill and then around the famous horseshoe curve until the summit was reached at Highmount station — the location of Grand Hotel, the

Open Door Whisks Woman From Plane at 12,000 Feet

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, July 28 (AP)—The door of a Pan American Airlines stratocruiser blew open in flight yesterday and the sudden draft sucked an American-born woman out of her seat and to her death in the Atlantic ocean 12,000 feet below.

The victim was identified as Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Westbrook Capellaro, daughter of Mrs. Bessie Machris of Los Angeles, Calif., and wife of Emilio Capellaro, a banker of Rome, Italy. She was accompanying Capellaro on a business trip.

(In Los Angeles, a spokesman for the woman's family said her mother knew she had planned to marry Capellaro but did not know the ceremony had taken place. He said the woman talked by telephone with her mother on Saturday and "did not say anything at that time about being married. I am sure she would have told her mother if she were." He identified the victim as the widow of U. S. Air Force Col. Robert B. Westbrook, who was shot down during World War 2.

The plane door blew off shortly after the takeoff from Rio de Janeiro, when the aircraft was 27 miles out on a flight to Montevideo, Uruguay. Passengers and crew members said they did not see the woman disappear. Capellaro, sitting next to her, said he was smoking and not looking in her direction.

The woman's seat, next to a window and just forward of the door, was twisted and part of the cloth lining the ceiling of the cabin was ripped off. The plane returned to Rio and three Brazilian Air Force planes were sent to search the area of the disappearance.

Three similar accidents have been reported in recent years. In 1947 the plastic observation dome of a Trans-World Constellation blew out 18,000 feet over the Atlantic ocean and George B. Hart, of Sag Harbor, N. Y., was drawn out. On Feb. 11, 1950, Pan American Steward John Harris, of New York, tried to close the accidentally-opened door of an airliner 8,000 feet above New York's Long Island and hurtled to his death from the pressurized cabin.

The same day the door of an Eastern Air Line plane suddenly burst open over Tampa Bay, Fla., the plane's steward, Marc Fisher-Galati, grabbed the door handle to close it, but as he was pulled partially out, hooked his right leg around a chain and held on desperately for 10 minutes until the plane was brought into St. Petersburg, 2,000 feet below.

Soldier Gets Term For His Desertion

Stuttgart, Germany, July 28 (AP)—An American soldier charged with deserting to the east for nearly a year and a half was sentenced Saturday by a general court martial to 21½ years' imprisonment at hard labor.

The soldier is Alexander S. Czarnecki, 23, of (8711 97th Ave.) Ozone Park, Long Island, N. Y. The U. S. Seventh Army announced he had been convicted of desertion and dereliction of duty.

The sentence included a dishonorable discharge from the army, in which Czarnecki was a corporal. The case is subject to review by higher army authorities.

The trial, closed to the public for security reasons, was held at Strauoling, Germany, headquarters of the defendant's former outfit, the Sixth Armored Cavalry Regiment. The sentence was one of the stiffest short of death meted out by an American court martial in Germany.

Polish-born Czarnecki left his unit in December, 1950, and was returned last April. Most of the intervening time reportedly was spent in Czechoslovakia and Poland. Czarnecki was returned to army control April 10 after he went or was brought to the American embassy in Warsaw, Poland. A month earlier the radio in Communist-governed Czechoslovakia claimed the GI had sought asylum in that country because he was "dissatisfied with American imperialism."

Training Is Begun

Eva Peron Dies; Body Is in State

Buenos Aires, Argentina, July 28 (AP)—Argentina's humble thousands paid grieving homage today to Eva Peron. They waited four abreast in mile-long queues for a 20-second walk past the bier of their president's wife and political partner, who died Saturday night after a long illness.

Mrs. Peron's death in her early 30's was generally attributed to cancer although there had been no official announcement of the nature of her illness.

The blonde wife of President Juan D. Peron lay in state in the hall of the Labor Ministry, in a glass-topped casket of mahogany draped in white orchids awaiting a full military funeral tomorrow afternoon. Tons of lilies, roses and carnations packed the hall and overflowed into the streets outside.

Admitted to Chapel

Crowds of somberly dressed, sober-faced mourners were first admitted to the improvised chapel Sunday afternoon and continued in an endless procession throughout the night and morning.

Peron spent much of Sunday beside the casket and personally arranged the placement of the bier. After a private funeral Mass, attended only by government ministers and intimate friends, he ordered the restless crowds admitted. They had shouted to see the body, and once broke a police cordon to get closer to the entrance.

Peron's decision still was awaited on his wife's permanent burial place. Two suggested sites are the new headquarters of the multi-million dollar Social Foundation which she headed, or in a great national monument built for her.

Most Potent Force

Temporary interment, at her own request, will be in the hall of the 6,000,000-member General Labor Confederation. She was the unofficial head of the CGT, and her following among its members made her the nation's most potent political force after Peron himself. At the age of 30—according to her official count—the slim beauty was regarded as the most powerful woman in politics in the world.

Two days of national grief and 30 days of official mourning were declared.

Woman Is Injured

New York, July 28 (AP)—A limousine carrying a driver and seven passengers returning from the Catskill Mountains collided in downtown Manhattan yesterday with a taxicab. New York (AP)—The Dominican Republic, which 20 years ago depended entirely on rice imports, now ranks as the major rice producing country of the Caribbean area. The Dominican information office in New York said 1951 rice production was 66,263 tons. The announcement noted that the threat of communism in the Far East made it imperative for Caribbean countries to grow products formerly obtain there.

Radar Picks Up 'Saucers' Again

Washington, July 28 (AP)—Radar—which normally doesn't show something that isn't there—has picked up "flying saucers" near the nation's capital for the second time within a week.

Jet fighter pilots searched the skies without directly contacting anything during the six hours that four to 12 unidentified objects intermittently appeared on radar screens at Washington National Airport and nearby Andrews Air Force base.

One pilot said he saw four lights approximately 10 miles away and slightly above him but they disappeared before he could overtake them. Later, the same pilot said, he saw "a steady white light" five miles away that vanished in about a minute.

First Time on Trail

So far as could be determined, this was the first time jets have been sent on the trail of such sky ghosts.

Officials carefully avoided mentioning "flying saucers," just as they did when radar picked up seven or eight unidentified objects near Washington last Monday. But the air force was expected to add the report to its long list of saucer sightings, which officials say are coming in faster than at any time since the initial flurry in 1947.

An air force spokesman said all necessary steps were being taken to evaluate the newest phenomenon.

There was no agreement whether the recent reports are the first of such mystery objects appearing on radar. At least, officials agreed they are unusual.

Radar normally does not register anything without substance—such as light. But it can pick up such things as a bird in flight or a cloud formation. And one expert said radar is not infallible.

No Politics, He Says

New York, July 28 (AP)—Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., arrived at Idlewild airport late yesterday from Chicago, where he attended the Democratic national convention as a delegate from New York. Roosevelt would not discuss politics. He was accompanied by his wife and his 14-year-old son, Franklin D. the Third. The Roosevelts left the airport for their farm in Dutchess county to get a few days' rest.

Manila, July 28 (AP)—Squalls buffeted Manila and other northern Luzon areas today as a 70-mile an hour typhoon bore down on the cluster of islands between Luzon and Formosa. ### Get Napoleon Willow

New Bedford, Mass. (AP)—The manager of a golf course in France, laid out on a one-time hunting preserve used by Napoleon, was delighted to get from a New Bedford tree fancier a descendant of the willow that shaded Napoleon's grave. "There's hardly a willow around here that didn't come from Napoleon's grave," according to Laurence Brooks, retired cotton broker whose hobby now is wood and trees. The island of St. Helena where Napoleon was exiled and died was a port of call for whaling vessels, Brooks points out, and many a New Bedford whaling captain and captain's wife broke off a twig from the willow over Napoleon's grave. It was brought home in a water-filled bottle to root in New Bedford soil. It was from such a willow, planted in Milton, Mass., by the wife of a whaling captain from this area that the willow gift to the French golf course was taken.

Engineers and scientists especially are in demand. Salaries are up 1-to 20 per cent, Robb says. Starting salaries for engineers are between $300 and $400 a month.

The sentence included a dishonorable discharge from the army, in which Czarnecki was a corporal. The case is subject to review by higher army authorities.

The trial, closed to the public for security reasons, was held at Straubling, Germany, headquarters of the defendant's former outfit, the Sixth Armored Cavalry Regiment. The sentence was one of the stiffest short of death meted out by an American court martial in Germany.

Polish-born Czarnecki left his unit in December, 1950, and was returned last April. Most of the intervening time reportedly was spent in Czechoslovakia and Poland. Czarnecki was returned to army control April 10 after he went or was brought to the American embassy in Warsaw, Poland. A month earlier the radio in Communist-governed Czechoslovakia claimed the GI had sought asylum in that country because he was "dissatisfied with American imperialism."

Training Is Begun

Eva Peron Dies; Body Is in State

Buenos Aires, Argentina, July 28 (AP)—Argentina's humble thousands paid grieving homage today to Eva Peron. They waited four abreast in mile-long queues for a 20-second walk past the bier of their president's wife and political partner, who died Saturday night after a long illness.

Mrs. Peron's death in her early 30's was generally attributed to cancer although there had been no official announcement of the nature of her illness.

The blonde wife of President Juan D. Peron lay in state in the hall of the Labor Ministry, in a glass-topped casket of mahogany draped in white orchids awaiting a full military funeral tomorrow afternoon. Tons of lilies, roses and carnations packed the hall and overflowed into the streets outside.

Admitted to Chapel

Crowds of somberly dressed, sober-faced mourners were first admitted to the improvised chapel Sunday afternoon and continued in an endless procession throughout the night and morning.

Peron spent much of Sunday beside the casket and personally arranged the placement of the bier. After a private funeral Mass, attended only by government ministers and intimate friends, he ordered the restless crowds admitted. They had shouted to see the body, and once broke a police cordon to get closer to the entrance.

Peron's decision still was awaited on his wife's permanent burial place. Two suggested sites are the new headquarters of the multi-million dollar Social Foundation which she headed, or in a great national monument built for her.

Most Potent Force

Temporary interment, at her own request, will be in the hall of the 6,000,000-member General Labor Confederation. She was the unofficial head of the CGT, and her following among its members made her the nation's most potent political force after Peron himself. At the age of 30—according to her official count—the slim beauty was regarded as the most powerful woman in politics in the world.

Two days of national grief and 30 days of official mourning were declared.

Woman Is Injured

Caribbean Rice Producer

New York (AP)—The Dominican Republic, which 20 years ago depended entirely on rice imports, now ranks as the major rice producing country of the Caribbean area. The Dominican information office in New York said 1951 rice production was 66,263 tons. The announcement noted that the threat of communism in the Far East made it imperative for Caribbean countries to grow products formerly obtain there.

Radar Picks Up 'Saucers' Again

Washington, July 28 (AP)—Radar—which normally doesn't show something that isn't there—has picked up "flying saucers" near the nation's capital for the second time within a week.

Jet fighter pilots searched the skies without directly contacting anything during the six hours that four to 12 unidentified objects intermittently appeared on radar screens at Washington National Airport and nearby Andrews Air Force base.

One pilot said he saw four lights approximately 10 miles away and slightly above him but they disappeared before he could overtake them. Later, the same pilot said, he saw "a steady white light" five miles away that vanished in about a minute.

First Time on Trail

So far as could be determined, this was the first time jets have been sent on the trail of such sky ghosts.

Officials carefully avoided mentioning "flying saucers," just as they did when radar picked up seven or eight unidentified objects near Washington last Monday. But the air force was expected to add the report to its long list of saucer sightings, which officials say are coming in faster than at any time since the initial flurry in 1947.

An air force spokesman said all necessary steps were being taken to evaluate the newest phenomenon.

There was no agreement whether the recent reports are the first of such mystery objects appearing on radar. At least, officials agreed they are unusual.

Radar normally does not register anything without substance—such as light. But it can pick up such things as a bird in flight or a cloud formation. And one expert said radar is not infallible.

No Politics, He Says

New York, July 28 (AP)—Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., arrived at Idlewild airport late yesterday from Chicago, where he attended the Democratic national convention as a delegate from New York. Roosevelt would not discuss politics. He was accompanied by his wife and his 14-year-old son, Franklin D. the Third. The Roosevelts left the airport for their farm in Dutchess county to get a few days' rest.

Squalls Hit Manila

Manila, July 28 (AP)—Squalls buffeted Manila and other northern Luzon areas today as a 70-mile an hour typhoon bore down on the cluster of islands between Luzon and Formosa. The Manila Weather Bureau in mid-afternoon located the typhoon 95 miles due east of Aparri, North Luzon coastal town. The storm mass was moving northwestward at 12 miles an hour.

Get Napoleon Willow

New Bedford, Mass. (AP)—The manager of a golf course in France, laid out on a one-time hunting preserve used by Napoleon, was delighted to get from a New Bedford tree fancier a descendant of the willow that shaded Napoleon's grave. "There's hardly a willow around here that didn't come from Napoleon's grave," according to Laurence Brooks, retired cotton broker whose hobby now is wood and trees. The island of St. Helena where Napoleon was exiled and died was a port of call for whaling vessels, Brooks points out, and many a New Bedford whaling captain and captain's wife broke off a twig from the willow over Napoleon's grave. It was brought home in a water-filled bottle to root in New Bedford soil. It was from such a willow, planted in Milton, Mass., by the wife of a whaling captain from this area that the willow gift to the French golf course was taken.

Handicap Unnoticed

Santa Ana, Calif. (AP) — Rudy 23, proprietor of Santa Ana's Storyland Market, handles customer's orders so well many never notice his handicap. Rudy was blinded when struck by a car years ago while in kindergarten. After graduating from high school with honors, Rudy started working in his father's market. Now, as long as everything is kept in its proper place, the young merchant has no trouble filling orders or making change. However, Rudy says he still hasn't found a way to avoid asking the denominations of paper money.

Advice Saves Hubby

Centralia, Ill. (AP)—"I think it's time to get up. It's pretty bad," Mrs. Oscar McClay told her husband. A windy rain storm raged 'round their southern Illinois farm home. McClay said he had just left his bed from the top of their house blew off, showering bricks on his bed. He admitted he might have been killed if he had not acted on his wife's advice.

140 Die in Blast

Hong Kong, July 28 (AP)—The pro-Nationalist Kung Sheung Daily News says 140 Chinese Communist party workers and miners were killed July 18 in an explosion in a wolfram (magnesium ore) mine near Yeungshan in Kwangtung province of Red China. The newspaper's informant said Communist authorities blamed the explosion on saboteurs.

Seniors in Demand

Dallas (AP)—Southern Methodist University shares with other U. S. colleges in the "seller's market" on the 1952 college seniors. D. Y. Robb, director of student placement at EMU, say the demand for college grads by business and industry and the salaries they can command have reached a record high this year. Engineers and scientists especially are in demand. Salaries are up 1-to 20 per cent, Robb says. Starting salaries for engineers are between $300 and $400 a month.

Lightning Damage

Glenwood, Ia. (AP)—During the April Missouri river flood the corn crib was the only building which escaped severe damage on the farm of Shirley Lincoln, Jr. Then recently while the Lincoln family still was living in Glenwood pending rehabilitation of their farm home, a bolt of lightning struck the corn crib. Fire destroyed the crib.

Will Ground Planes

Cards Will Define Type of Game

By OSWALD JACOBY

Written for NEA Service

One of the delights of writing a daily column is that you're sure to be misquoted no matter what you say. In my case, I have written about the advantages of playing for a big score so often that I got worried about repeating myself.

I needn't have worried, however, for a fan has just written in to say that he likes my column, reads it all the time, and agrees with it except that he thinks I should advocate playing for a big score.

Hence I suppose it's time to stress this point again. Play for a big score when you have superior cards; minimize your loss when you have inferior cards.

It's unrealistic to play for a big score on every hand. You do so when you have a good hand or when an opponent makes a serious mistake. But when you have a poor hand and the opponents are playing carefully, you must play defensively.

Let's take an example. Both sides need 120 points for the initial meld. You are dealt two jokers and three small pairs as part of your original hand. That is a wonderful hand, since you will be able to take the pack whenever the player at your right throws one of the cards that match your pairs. You can even afford to let the pack grow a bit before bothering to pick it up.

With such a hand you play for a big score. You don't want to meld out in a hurry. You want to pick up a big discard pile and then keep control of the pile for as long a time as possible. With luck and good management you can get several thousand points out of such a hand.

In playing for a big score, you try to keep as many pairs as possible. If you develop three or four of a kind while you are waiting for the right discard, you may have to part with the extra cards in those sets just to keep room in your hand for several pairs.

Obviously, this is risky. The chances are that you will gain by it, however, so that your gamble is a good one.

The story is quite different when you are dealt such a hand as four kings, two deuces, and five miscellaneous cards. To begin with, you will have trouble making the count of 120 points. Even if you acquire a joker fairly soon, you can't hope to win the pack without pairs.

With this type of hand it would be the wildest kind of folly to discard a king or two in the hope of keeping pairs and winning the pack. This is the time to build up your hand in the hope of melding out before the opponents score too much.

Mr. Jacoby is unable to answer individual questions on Canasta from readers. However, he will include the most frequently asked questions in his column.

Watchmaking Is Intricate

New York (AP) — American watchmakers have developed a new microscopic technique to insure further accuracy in the manufacture of fine watches. It involves the attaching of a delicate hairspring to a collet or "spool" which controls the rate at which the balance wheel oscillates. An "eye-dropper" was designed to apply adhesive to the bonding surface. Since the collet slot is about the thickness of a human hair, so little adhersive is used that a teaspoonful will last an operator more than a week.

Beer Drinkers Seek Champ

Madrid (AP)—Top Spanish beer drinkers are "fighting" for the right to represent Spain in the Eupropean beer drinking championship this summer. The Spanish contest is organized by the recently constituted National Federation of Beer Drinkers. The federation, which already has 5,000 members, is also the organizer of the European championship to be held in Madrid. Countries invited are Germany, England, Italy, Belgium and Switzerland. Every foreign competitor will compete with the beer of his own country. The Spanish record is 7.9 quarts drunk in an hour in a tourney in Barcelona last year.

Mother Parachutes To Her Death in Exhibition Jump

Budd Lake, N. J., July 28 (AP)—A pretty mother, her parachute failing to open, plunged 2,500 feet to her death yesterday in an initiation for a parachuting club formed by her husband.

It was a scene of confusion and near-hysteria as 24-year-old Mrs. Dorothy Berard of Harrison tumbled from the small plane, clawed desperately at the parachute and finally fell in a cabbage patch.

"I killed her, I killed her," sobbed her grief-stricken husband, Joseph, who organized the Sky Divers Club, a parachuting-for-fun group. He collapsed when she fell.

About 700 spectators at the initiation exercises at Budd Lake airport shrieked and shouted for the woman to pull the ripcord as she hurtled to the ground. Many women fainted.

Just before Mrs. Berard, mother of a four-month-old daughter, went up, her husband considered refusing to let her make the jump because of a series of minor mishaps earlier.

Reassures Husband

But she reassured him by saying, "don't worry, honey, I'll be all right."

Berard, an ex-paratrooper with 74 jumps to his credit, was forcibly restrained from going to the spot where his wife fell.

He made the first jump of the day and suffered bruises about the head. A few minutes later, a small plane used by other club members crashed, but no one was hurt. Then Mrs. Sarah Hazelett of Union jumped and was knocked unconscious when she hit her head while landing. Mrs. Berard's fatal plunge climaxed the series of accidents.

Said one of the members: "This ends the club forever."

Divorced Parents Must Guard Against Losing Child's Trust

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

The divorced parents of a little girl of 13 are currently waging a much-discussed, bitter international fight over her custody. It's reported she wants to stay with her father and objects to visiting her mother.

Another child of 13 whose parents are embattled over her custody is in the news, too. Newspapers have published a letter she wrote to Pia Lindstrom. In it, she says, "I am 13 and you are 13 and a girl needs a mother. Don't let yourself be influenced."

A child of 13 who lives with one parent who is fighting another for his custody can no more avoid being influenced by the tensions around him than he could avoid reacting to the temperature generated by an overheated furnace.

Divorced parents who resent having to share their child will do well to recognize this—and take steps to protect him against the influence of their anxiety and anger. Unless such steps are taken, they may lose him.

None of us is perfect in wisdom. Since we make mistakes today, the chances are we'll make a few tomorrow. When our child is 13, he may regard us as perfectly just, perfectly right. But this impression does not last.

When he is 19 or 20, he forms judgments of his own. It is his nature then to question ours if they do not check with his. As he begins to question our judgment on late hours, his choice of friends, on the fun he enjoys, we cease to be perfect to him and every value we have ever given him comes under close scrutiny.

Then the divorced parent who has presented himself as faultless is in trouble. If he has laid all the weight of blame for his unhappiness on his former partner, this idea comes under close scrutiny along with all his others.

The bill comes in for the bitter condemnation in which we have indulged and the child who has begun to question thinks: "How mistaken is my mother's judgment of my friend! How quickly this father of mine leaps to conclusions! Was this what my absent parent had to put up with?"

When this happens, our child is without anchor. He is orphaned of trust in both his parents.

When we are sick with a high fever, our judgment of cold and heat is unreliable. When we are feverish with anger at what we believe is betrayal, our judgment of the betrayer is unreliable.

While nobody with any understanding of the human heart could ask us to feel tenderness for one who seems to have injured our hopes for happiness, we should be able, if we are grownup people, to bring honesty to our situation. We should at least be able to admit our abnormal state and make it known to the child we profess to love to protect his trust in us.

Unless we feel we must claim perfection, we should be able to say, "Look, my dear, I have been hurt and am very angry. Therefore, I do not see clearly. So what I say of your absent parent is unreliable. Love me—but do not believe what I say for a while."

Then we may keep our child and he will keep us.

Our efforts to justify our cause by trying to alienate our child from his other parent is distrust of our own cause. If we trusted it, we would not need to exert self-will upon the young person for whom our misjudgment has created many problems.

We would be able to share him up with his other parent, knowing that he must himself discover what is wrong and what is right in both his father and his mother.

Fear Dive-Bombing Birds

Newton, Ia. (AP)—Dive-bombing bluejays are terrorizing the people of Newton. Several youngsters have been badly frightened when they were "buzzed" by the jays and one was severly scratched by repeated attacks. Police killed two of the birds and thought the attacks were ended. But a few days later Don Jennings, Newton photographer, was picking cherries and an infuriated jay nicked him twice on the head. Jennings killed the bird with an air pistol.

Cards Will Define Type of Game

By OSWALD JACOBY

Written for NEA Service

One of the delights of writing a daily column is that you're sure to be misquoted no matter what you say. In my case, I have written about the advantages of playing for a big score so often that I got worried about repeating myself.

I needn't have worried, however, for a fan has just written in to say that he likes my column, reads it all the time, and agrees with it except that he thinks I should advocate playing for a big score.

Hence I suppose it's time to stress this point again. Play for a big score when you have superior cards; minimize your loss when you have inferior cards.

It's unrealistic to play for a big score on every hand. You do so when you have a good hand or when an opponent makes a serious mistake. But when you have a poor hand and the opponents are playing carefully, you must play defensively.

Let's take an example. Both sides need 120 points for the initial meld. You are dealt two jokers and three small pairs as part of your original hand. That is a wonderful hand, since you will be able to take the pack whenever the player at your right throws one of the cards that match your pairs. You can even afford to let the pack grow a bit before bothering to pick it up.

With such a hand you play for a big score. You don't want to meld out in a hurry. You want to pick up a big discard pile and then keep control of the pile for as long a time as possible. With luck and good management you can get several thousand points out of such a hand.

In playing for a big score, you try to keep as many pairs as possible. If you develop three or four of a kind while you are waiting for the right discard, you may have to part with the extra cards in those sets just to keep room in your hand for several pairs.

Obviously, this is risky. The chances are that you will gain by it, however, so that your gamble is a good one.

The story is quite different when you are dealt such a hand as four kings, two deuces, and five miscellaneous cards. To begin with, you will have trouble making the count of 120 points. Even if you acquire a joker fairly soon, you can't hope to win the pack without pairs.

With this type of hand it would be the wildest kind of folly to discard a king or two in the hope of keeping pairs and winning the pack. This is the time to build up your hand in the hope of melding out before the opponents score too much.

Mr. Jacoby is unable to answer individual questions on Canasta from readers. However, he will include the most frequently asked questions in his column.

Watchmaking Is Intricate

New York (AP) — American watchmakers have developed a new microscopic technique to insure further accuracy in the manufacture of fine watches. It involves the attaching of a delicate hairspring to a collet or "spool" which controls the rate at which the balance wheel oscillates. An "eye-dropper" was designed to apply adhesive to the bonding surface. Since the collet slot is about the thickness of a human hair, so little adhersive is used that a teaspoonful will last an operator more than a week.

Beer Drinkers Seek Champ

Madrid (AP)—Top Spanish beer drinkers are "fighting" for the right to represent Spain in the Eupropean beer drinking championship this summer. The Spanish contest is organized by the recently constituted National Federation of Beer Drinkers. The federation, which already has 5,000 members, is also the organizer of the European championship to be held in Madrid. Countries invited are Germany, England, Italy, Belgium and Switzerland. Every foreign competitor will compete with the beer of his own country. The Spanish record is 7.9 quarts drunk in an hour in a tourney in Barcelona last year.

Mother Parachutes To Her Death in Exhibition Jump

Budd Lake, N. J., July 28 (AP)—A pretty mother, her parachute failing to open, plunged 2,500 feet to her death yesterday in an initiation for a parachuting club formed by her husband.

It was a scene of confusion and near-hysteria as 24-year-old Mrs. Dorothy Berard of Harrison tumbled from the small plane, clawed desperately at the parachute and finally fell in a cabbage patch.

"I killed her, I killed her," sobbed her grief-stricken husband, Joseph, who organized the Sky Divers Club, a parachuting-for-fun group. He collapsed when she fell.

About 700 spectators at the initiation exercises at Budd Lake airport shrieked and shouted for the woman to pull the ripcord as she hurtled to the ground. Many women fainted.

Just before Mrs. Berard, mother of a four-month-old daughter, went up, her husband considered refusing to let her make the jump because of a series of minor mishaps earlier.

Reassures Husband

But she reassured him by saying, "don't worry, honey, I'll be all right."

Berard, an ex-paratrooper with 74 jumps to his credit, was forcibly restrained from going to the spot where his wife fell.

He made the first jump of the day and suffered bruises about the head. A few minutes later, a small plane used by other club members crashed, but no one was hurt. Then Mrs. Sarah Hazelett of Union jumped and was knocked unconscious when she hit her head while landing. Mrs. Berard's fatal plunge climaxed the series of accidents.

Said one of the members: "This ends the club forever."

Divorced Parents Must Guard Against Losing Child's Trust

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

The divorced parents of a little girl of 13 are currently waging a much-discussed, bitter international fight over her custody. It's reported she wants to stay with her father and objects to visiting her mother.

Another child of 13 whose parents are embattled over her custody is in the news, too. Newspapers have published a letter she wrote to Pia Lindstrom. In it, she says, "I am 13 and you are 13 and a girl needs a mother. Don't let yourself be influenced."

A child of 13 who lives with one parent who is fighting another for his custody can no more avoid being influenced by the tensions around him than he could avoid reacting to the temperature generated by an overheated furnace.

Divorced parents who resent having to share their child will do well to recognize this—and take steps to protect him against the influence of their anxiety and anger. Unless such steps are taken, they may lose him.

None of us is perfect in wisdom. Since we make mistakes today, the chances are we'll make a few tomorrow. When our child is 13, he may regard us as perfectly just, perfectly right. But this impression does not last.

When he is 19 or 20, he forms judgments of his own. It is his nature then to question ours if they do not check with his. As he begins to question our judgment on late hours, his choice of friends, on the fun he enjoys, we cease to be perfect to him and every value we have ever given him comes under close scrutiny.

Then the divorced parent who has presented himself as faultless is in trouble. If he has laid all the weight of blame for his unhappiness on his former partner, this idea comes under close scrutiny along with all his others.

The bill comes in for the bitter condemnation in which we have indulged and the child who has begun to question thinks: "How mistaken is my mother's judgment of my friend! How quickly this father of mine leaps to conclusions! Was this what my absent parent had to put up with?"

When this happens, our child is without anchor. He is orphaned of trust in both his parents.

When we are sick with a high fever, our judgment of cold and heat is unreliable. When we are feverish with anger at what we believe is betrayal, our judgment of the betrayer is unreliable.

While nobody with any understanding of the human heart could ask us to feel tenderness for one who seems to have injured our hopes for happiness, we should be able, if we are grownup people, to bring honesty to our situation. We should at least be able to admit our abnormal state and make it known to the child we profess to love to protect his trust in us.

Unless we feel we must claim perfection, we should be able to say, "Look, my dear, I have been hurt and am very angry. Therefore, I do not see clearly. So what I say of your absent parent is unreliable. Love me—but do not believe what I say for a while."

Then we may keep our child and he will keep us.

Our efforts to justify our cause by trying to alienate our child from his other parent is distrust of our own cause. If we trusted it, we would not need to exert self-will upon the young person for whom our misjudgment has created many problems.

We would be able to share him up with his other parent, knowing that he must himself discover what is wrong and what is right in both his father and his mother.

Newton, Ia. (AP)—Dive-bombing bluejays are terrorizing the people of Newton. Several youngsters have been badly frightened when they were "buzzed" by the jays and one was severly scratched by repeated attacks. Police killed two of the birds and thought the attacks were ended. But a few days later Don Jennings, Newton photographer, was picking cherries and an infuriated jay nicked him twice on the head. Jennings killed the bird with an air pistol.

BRITAIN WILL NEED MORE AID

Poor and weakened England is in a bad way again. And it looks as if more bad news is yet to come.

After only nine months in power, Winston Churchill's Tory government already is knee-deep in trouble. Many observers on the scene believe that if a general election were held now, the Churchill government would lose. In fact, the latest poll puts the Socialists out ahead in popular support by 8.5 per cent.

The problems are many and varied. Some were inherited from the Socialist government. Others the Conservatives have brought upon themselves.

Britain's trade balance, vital to her very existence, is running more and more against her. Her dollar and gold reserves dropped markedly and might have dropped more except for support by America.

The Conservatives had great plans for bringing food prices down. But food prices have gone up. The much-heralded plan for denationalization of certain important industries has, to all intents and purposes, failed to materialize.

The Germans and the Japanese are cutting into British export markets.

To top it all, the popularity of Churchill himself appears to be suffering. Even members of his own party have been recently critical of the way the 77-year-old prime minister is handling things. They have suggested he either get out or at least share leadership of the government with younger men.

Against this melancholy background, Prime Minister Churchill has summoned the House of Commons for debate on "grave and far-reaching matters." Just what those matters will be is not definitely known. But a good guess would be some means of giving British exports a shot in the arm.

Whatever the outcome of the Commons debate, it will be of dollars-and-cents interest to this country. America has for some time been helping take up the slack in the sagging British economy. The chances are that we shall have to continue to do so in one form or another.

The question is how much slack do we have to take up and for how long a time? The results of the coming debate in Commons should provide at least part of the answer.

WEE FIGHT FOR FREEDOM

Independence is a quality that apparently is best appreciated when lost. Man has an inborn desire to be free individually and self-governing politically. The struggle for independence is timeless. In Sicily, for instance, a community has been struggling to regain its independence for more than two centuries.

The people of Aci San Filippo, a colorful village lying in view of Mount Etna, have been agitating for a return of self-government since 1727 when its administration was taken over by the neighboring town of Aci Catena. This provoked a bitter feud whose sharpness has not been dulled by time. People of these two communities, half a mile apart, still do not speak to each other.

Before the recent local elections the citizens of Aci San Filippo set up a committee which prepared a petition itemizing in detail the reasons why the village should be allowed autonomy. The petition was presented to the Sicilian regional government in Palmero but to give it added force, the citizens decided to boycott the polls at election time. Only 76 out of 1150 eligible citizens voted.

The epic of San Filippo may sound like peanuts compared with the struggle of Czechoslovakia, Libya, or any one of the large nations crushed by the boot of the oppressor. Yet it shows that the fire of freedom never dies. These two communities might long ago have agreed to consolidate, and some peacemaker may yet accomplish that, but never will the people of Aci San Filippo submit to having their autonomy arbitrarily taken from them.

Freedom can best be appreciated by those who lack it, yearn for it. Yet it would not be too much to ask free men to realize that they have one of the greatest gifts mankind can enjoy and that they must fight as hard to preserve it as those who lack it struggle to gain freedom.

POLITICAL CONTRASTS

Comparing the Republican and Democratic conventions, it is possible to reach the conclusion that a party out of power for a prolonged period, in this country, loses the art of political management.

The Democrats have had the same kind of a row as the Republicans and it gave every appearance of being deeper and of greater permanence. The dismissal from his candidacy of Vice President Alben Barkley by Jack Kroll of the C.I.O.-P.A.C.; the attempt of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Senators Blair Moody and Hubert Humphrey to purge the Southern states; the fight on FEPC and states rights could have produced a bolt. But such political operators as Sam Rayburn, Leslie Biffle, Jim Farley, Chairman of the National Committee Frank E. McKinney, determined that the party would not be split. To an astonishing degree, in view of the complex problems they faced, they succeeded.

The Republicans had no such mature leadership. It is true that the ovation for Herbert Hoover brought tears of joy and sympathy to many an eye, but nothing that he or General MacArthur said made any difference at all. Every effort that was initiated to keep the bitter quarrels off the convention floor was vetoed by Tom Dewey and Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. long before the Republican Convention opened. Herbert Hoover warned both sides of the dangers of fratricidal warfare in front of television cameras; yet, it was impossible to get the Eisenhower management to consider any form of compromise.

This is immature leadership, as, after all, the main business of a party is to elect its candidate and if events are permitted to occur on the convention floor which produce dissension and ill-will, the election is imperilled. The Republicans acted as though nothing mattered but the nomination; the Democratic leadership fought to preserve the party as was evidenced by the brilliant tactics of keeping Virginia, Louisiana and South Carolina seated.

Again, I contrast the two keynote speeches. General MacArthur's speech was his own views. Governor Dever's keynote speech was a party document which laid down the line for the campaign.

Again, I must contrast the positive presiding tactics of Speaker Sam Rayburn and his Republican counterpart, Joe Martin. Rayburn, in his very first words, assumed the full authority of his position and challenged all recalcitrant elements in the convention to behave like gentlemen. He killed a fight on the platform with courage and skill. His was a swift, sharp handling of difficult situations.

The Democrats had the advantage of having watched the Republicans performance, and seeing how horrid it was. They tried to make improvements. One improvement was to keep such characters as Governor Dewey of New York and Governor Fine of Pennsylvania—and the Democrats must have plenty of them too—from strutting and blustering and becoming featured actors in a ham show. They limited the time of speakers and made them stick to the arrangements.

The essential difference is that in the 20 years that the Democrats have been in office, their seniors have mastered the art of politics and political operations. And they want to stay in office. This was never more obvious than in the parade up to the rostrum, after Barkley's speech, of all the party leaders, including those who instigated Jack Kroll's disrespectful and ill-mannered nonsense about Barkley being too old. Incidentally, how old is Phil Murray or William Green or John L. Lewis?

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Blair Moody, Hubert Humphrey, Herbert Lehman and other rebels blatantly and vociferously marched to the rostrum to toe the mark of party unity. That did not happen at any time in the Republican Convention. There was no joining of forces even to try to end factionalism. There was a chance for that after Hoover's speech; it was missed. Then Dirksen made his attack on Tom Dewey, the convention booed Dewey, the bitterness bubbled over and is still bubbling. It could have been averted by political know-how.

Political maturity does not require subordination to the will of leadership. It does involve an understanding of goals and objectives. It does insist upon compromises and restraints in order that the goals and objectives may be achieved.

The senior leadership in the Democratic party grasped these essentials of party management; the Republicans ran away from the seniors and lost the advantages of experience.

It will be interesting and even important to se how these contrasts affect the management and results of the forthcoming campaign.

HEALTH INSURANCE

In these days, when we are all becoming more conscious about health and sickness, it is a real sign of the times to learn of the millions of people who are insuring themselves against the costs of ill health, with its expenses for medicine, physicians and hospital care.

An editorial in Post Graduate Medicine, on "The Growth of Insurance Against the Costs of Illness," gives interesting and authentic information on this subject.

"The most recent report on accident and health coverage in the United States (and this holds true in proportion for Canada) prepared by the Survey Committee of Health Insurance Council, indicates that at the end of 1950, there were almost 77 million people insured against hospital expense, almost 55 million against surgical expense, and more than 21 million against medical expense. The total increase of 1950 over 1949 was 17 per cent increase for hospital expense, 32 for surgical expense and 28 for medical."

The editorial states further that protection against medical expense, provided mostly by Blue Shield, the local societies and insurance companies, is new but its progress has been rapid. "The benefits range from payments toward the expense of doctors' calls in the hospital to comprehensive coverage of home, hospital and office treatments and examinations." Also, expense of laboratory, X-ray and other examinations for diagnostic purposes may be included.

Another important point emphasized was the great interest of people in covering themselves with insurance against hospital expense. This, no doubt represents the greatest need in the situation.

There is no question but that most of us feel that we can meet the expense of ordinary illnesses, but when we think of the expenses of hospital care, despite the great aid given hospitals by the community and the efficient business management now existing which allows physicians to give their entire care to the sick, we realize that insurance against hospital care is absolutely necessary for our peace of mind.

How Green Were the Conventions

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington — While the politicians have been watching the none-too-mysterious conventions, same other people, including the air force, have been watching a mysterious rash of flying saucers.

Furthermore, the air force, long skeptical about flying saucers has now made some official and important admissions.

Admission No. 1. Is that they have now detected something that looks like flying saucers on radar at the same time that people have claimed they saw flying saucers. In other words flying saucers are not just cloud freaks or hallucinations. If so they could not be detected on a radar screen.

Admission No. 2. Is that flying saucers could possibly be space ships from another planet. The reason for this admission is that it will soon be possible for us to build a space ship to visit the moon if we are willing to spend the money for research and construction.

Our current research into atomic power and supersonic speeds already has progressed so far that it is definitely known such a ship can be built, but the big expense would come from creating atmosphere inside the ship to support human life while traveling from one planet to the other.

Therefore if we are this close to interplanetary travel, air force officers admit that a more advanced civilization could be keeping this planet under surveillance through flying saucers.

Admission No. 3. It has not been announced, but scientific observation posts have been set up in New Mexico, where we are testing guided missiles, to track flying saucers also. A number of flying saucers have been seen in the southwest, and since trained specialists are already on the job in that area with the latest scientific gadgets, the air force has ordered them to watch for flying saucers and track them scientifically.

In addition, the air force has instructed its 24-hour air observers to watch not only for enemy planes but flying saucers. Furthermore it has set up special cameras on its radar screens to keep a pictorial record of flying saucers or any other strange objects flitting across the screens.

Finally, Wright Field, at Dayton, O., the center of all air force research, has been instructed to chart all flying saucer patterns, find out whether their light behavior is similar, and what characteristics they seem to have in common.

This was started only two months ago and no similar patterns have yet been reported, except for the peculiar fact that more flying saucers have been observed around U. S. atomic centers and around Wright Field than anyplace else. This could be because observers from another planet were interested in our atomic and air development, though the air force thinks it's more likely to be because the population around these bases is more sensitive to something strange in the skies.

However, while air force officials are taking every precaution to solve the mystery they also warn that the first flying saucers was seen by the prophet Ezekiel who reported seeing a flying wheel in the heavens.

The air force has tracked down thousands of fantastic reports from that of George Koehler of Denver, who reported blond beardless three-foot men from Venus, to the movies taken by Nick Mariana of Great Falls, Mont. The beardless men turned out to be a hoax, and the movies turned out to be pictures of two high-flying jet fighters.

So, while the air force is doing everything possible to solve the mystery, it still has its collective fingers crossed.

Steel-Negotiation Difficulty

The administration began working two weeks ago to settle the steel dispute so President Truman or Phil Murray could announce it at the Democratic convention. That may have been why a special price concession was offered the steel industry by the White House at that time, despite Truman's veto of the price increase proposed last March by Charles E. Wilson, the defense mobilizer who resigned after Truman reversed him.

Here is the inside story of the negotiation which began two weeks before the convention and at first blew up in smoke.

About a week before the convention U. S. Steel's Ben Fairless went to the White House and informed Defense Mobilizer John Steelman: "If you'll give us a worth-while price increase, I will guarantee to have the strike settled within one hour of my return to Pittsburgh."

"What do you call worth while, Mr. Fairless?" Steelman asked.

Fairless said he wanted a price boost averaging $5.65 for all types of steel.

Steelman finally gave Fairless an assurance that the government would permit the $5.65 boost, then urged Fairless to return to Pittsburgh immediately to settle the strike "within an hour" as promised.

Steelman confidently passed the good news on to both Roger Putnam and Ellis Arnall.

The next day, however, Steelman was abruptly surprised by a long distance call from Fairless. "I can't settle this strike for $5.65-per-ton increase," he said. "The union has just increased its demands. I'll need a better price boost."

Steelman then phoned Phil Murray to ask about the "new union demands" in blunt language, Murray told Steelman that the union had not altered its position one iota. Murray proceeded to prove his point by reiterating the union position.

It was at this point that Steelman became convinced that the steel companies were negotiating in bad faith, and were not out to settle the strike but to get all the traffic would bear.

Economic Stabilizer Putnam, equally furious, told a private conference: "These steel people apparently think they can blackmail and doublecross the government. They're not going to get away with it as long as I'm here. As far as I'm concerned, they're only entitled to $3.50 a ton increase. They can wait till hell freezes over before they get any more."

The Island of Manhattan was not settled by the Dutch. Its first settlers were the Walloons of France and Belgium, 32 families strong, who arrived here in May 1624 on the good ship "Niew Nederlands." Their leader was a Walloon named Jesse de Forest, a native of French Flanders, near Belgium. They were the first white inhabitants of what is now the State of New York. They disembarked at the mouth of the Hudson and named the new settlement Novum Belgium (New Belgium). Two years later the Dutch arrived and renamed the country New Amsterdam.

How Will Voters React, What Will Be Things Influencing Final Choice?

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, July 28—Now that two good candidates for the presidency have been nominated, the question that most everybody is asking is how the voters will react and what will be the principal things influencing their final choice.

All too often in American political history, unfortunately even when one candidate is plainly superior to the other, the better man has not been elected. It is in the study of such campaigns that the answer must be sought to the 1952 contest. For issues sometimes dwarf the importance of the personality of the better candidate and better campaigner.

The most recent case in point was when James M. Cox, Democrat, ran against Warren Harding, Republican, in 1920. Nobody at that time thought for a moment that Harding was even in the same class with Cox so far as qualifications for the presidency were concerned. Harding had been a rather colorless senator while Cox had three times been elected governor of Ohio, a Republican state.

As for campaigning, Cox toured the country from coast to coast and made excellent speeches and a fine impression on the voters who heard him. Harding stayed at Marion, Ohio, and conducted what was known then as a "front porch" campaign. He made a few speeches to visiting delegations. His addresses were full of ponderous phrases and ambiguities.

Cox embraced the Woodrow Wilson record and championed the League of Nations which Wilson had sponsored. He started out just as Governor Stevenson has done this time by accepting the record of the preceding Democratic administration and standing on it. This correspondent was sympathetic to the Wilson international policies and was impressed with the ability of Cox.

Traveling westward to the Pacific coast, this writer left the Cox campaign train at the Pacific coast in order to make an independent investigation and, on returning eastward, discovered to his surprise that people didn't bother to ask about Cox or discuss his abilities—they were just fed up with the Wilson administration and wanted a "change." While there were some elements which were opposed to the league and this in certain states helped swing Irish and German groups from the Democratic party into the Republican party, the basic tide was one of irritation with wartime restrictions — economic discontent growing out of high prices and other disturbances produced by wartime conditions.

This writer found the tide running against the Democratic party in state after state and so reported each day, finally winding up in the week before the election with a prediction that Harding would win by a comfortable majority. But actually Harding's victory was a landslide—the biggest sweep the Republican party had achieved in all its history. In that election, incidentally, women voted for the first time.

Is there a parallel between 1920 and 1952? It is too early to answer that but the analogy is worth examining by the campaign managers of both sides because if they think the personality of the candidate and the virtues of one or the other are going to be controlling they have another guess coming. It is the issues which will count most and the relationship of those issues to the fundamental thinking of the electorate.

Do the voters want a "change"? Unquestionably they do. The Democratic National Convention accepted as sincere President Truman's desire to retire and selected Governor Stevenson. The Democratic stump speakers will argue this is a "change." So far as personalities are concerned they are right, but will Stevenson accept the Truman policies 100 per cent? In what respect will he change men and policies? Will he clean house at Washington and get rid of the parasites of 20 years?

Stevenson will be on the defensive on this sort of attack which apparently has already begun from the Eisenhower-Nixon camp. The Republicans in 1920 conducted a passive campaign—they had the support of the isolationists and the internationalists in their own ranks despite the sharp cleavage between the factions. When it was all over there wasn't much logic in what the voters did —they chose an inferior mind and an inferior character for the presidency and rejected a splendidly equipped statesman. But the people wanted a "change"—and they got it.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Chicago, July 24 — The judgment of a noted newspaper publisher many years ago that it is impossible to overestimate the stupidity of the American people has been put to the acid test in this year's conventions of the Republicans and Democrats. Vindication in lavish measure issued from the first act of this Idiots' Delight. Predictions were heard, however, as the frayed and sheepish Republicans slunk away to resume their wonted nonentity in Bridgeport, Burlington and Dallas, that the Democrats, being shrewd professionals, always thinking well ahead of the brutish reactions of the masses, would therefore renounce the traditional follies lest they nauseate hoi polloi and lose the election.

Television had come along fast since the shaky experiments of 1948 and the candid camera caught the Republicans in revolting flagrancies, most of them unaware that they were in the act. The Democrats would profit by the naive mistake and improvise a new decorum out of respect for the people's intelligence, taste and patriotism. This guess was unofficial and, as events have shown, entirely incorrect. On the contrary, being professionals with a long, consistent record of unrelieved vulgarity, personal and political indecency, insulting contempt for the Common Man, and uninterrupted success, they never doubted that the thing to do was to multiply the dose.

This judgment ruled their show from the earliest excuse for a lunatic rout through Alben Barkley's act of degradation, a spectacle of truly majestic ignominy, and on to higher and higher peaks of maudlin uproar.

True to the confident opinion of all who had followed his career, Barkley, in the fitting language of the prizefight racket, dogged it as he had in every other crisis in his political career. Yet there were some on hand as he loosed his first counterfeit bellow whose very tripes writhed with pity and scorn for a man so little sensitive to shame. Barkley had let Roosevelt and Harry Hopkins steal an election for him in a massive fraud as flagrant as the one which later sent Harry Truman to the Senate on his way to the White House.

In a moment of unwonted integrity and pride, he had cried out against Roosevelt's humilitating abuse, even resigning his leadership, but, thinking on the awful thing that he had done, was frightened into quick capitulation. These landmarks should have prepared the multitude in the hall and scattered in their millions across the land, for anti-climax when his time came to speak, against known precedents, however, even some journalists could not believe that Barkley would close his career without so much as a whisper against the arrogance and treachery of the union racketeers who thumbed him out of the contest.

But the real delight did not come till he had licked up the whole mess and wiped his mouth with his sleeve. Then the managers of this fantastic thing, to which the Americans entrust their lives, their fortunes and their paltry counterfeit of honor, really spat on their hands. They swarmed around the grinning old man, pumping his arm and even kissing his cheek.

Barkley reveled in his ignominy waving his arms and drinking deep the wormwood with the laurel flopping over his ears. It was a spectacle to wring the hearts of decent men, an old machine politician brutally betrayed by his accomplices, teetering drunk in sheer sensual ecstacy over a half hour of noise.

They need not have rubbed it in, but knowing that nothing could make him sick or move him to serious resentment, they dredged up Jimmy Petrillo, the tyrant boss of the Musician's Union, whose constitution makes his power absolute and his term of office equal to the term of his life, and made Barkley pose there with this smirking hedgehog, although it was the unions which had done him in.

Eleanor Roosevelt, notorious for many personal political enormities, had been thrown in their faces and her strange, terrible voice, like the gobble of a yardful of turkeys, whooped on and on in banal periods until she had had her say and another triumph over a people who fancy themselves proud, intellingent and great.

At the hot dog stand to the left of the hall in the rear, a man in a silly hat remarked to the little red-head behind the counter: "Mah Democratic party! And we got to listen to ol' hoss-face!" The little red-head's face broke into a sun-burst and she grabbed his hand with both of hers as the

BRITAIN WILL NEED MORE AID

Poor and weakened England is in a bad way again. And it looks as if more bad news is yet to come.

After only nine months in power, Winston Churchill's Tory government already is knee-deep in trouble. Many observers on the scene believe that if a general election were held now, the Churchill government would lose. In fact, the latest poll puts the Socialists out ahead in popular support by 8.5 per cent.

The problems are many and varied. Some were inherited from the Socialist government. Others the Conservatives have brought upon themselves.

Britain's trade balance, vital to her very existence, is running more and more against her. Her dollar and gold reserves dropped markedly and might have dropped more except for support by America.

The Conservatives had great plans for bringing food prices down. But food prices have gone up. The much-heralded plan for denationalization of certain important industries has, to all intents and purposes, failed to materialize.

The Germans and the Japanese are cutting into British export markets.

To top it all, the popularity of Churchill himself appears to be suffering. Even members of his own party have been recently critical of the way the 77-year-old prime minister is handling things. They have suggested he either get out or at least share leadership of the government with younger men.

Against this melancholy background, Prime Minister Churchill has summoned the House of Commons for debate on "grave and far-reaching matters." Just what those matters will be is not definitely known. But a good guess would be some means of giving British exports a shot in the arm.

Whatever the outcome of the Commons debate, it will be of dollars-and-cents interest to this country. America has for some time been helping take up the slack in the sagging British economy. The chances are that we shall have to continue to do so in one form or another.

The question is how much slack do we have to take up and for how long a time? The results of the coming debate in Commons should provide at least part of the answer.

WEE FIGHT FOR FREEDOM

Independence is a quality that apparently is best appreciated when lost. Man has an inborn desire to be free individually and self-governing politically. The struggle for independence is timeless. In Sicily, for instance, a community has been struggling to regain its independence for more than two centuries.

The people of Aci San Filippo, a colorful village lying in view of Mount Etna, have been agitating for a return of self-government since 1727 when its administration was taken over by the neighboring town of Aci Catena. This provoked a bitter feud whose sharpness has not been dulled by time. People of these two communities, half a mile apart, still do not speak to each other.

Before the recent local elections the citizens of Aci San Filippo set up a committee which prepared a petition itemizing in detail the reasons why the village should be allowed autonomy. The petition was presented to the Sicilian regional government in Palmero but to give it added force, the citizens decided to boycott the polls at election time. Only 76 out of 1150 eligible citizens voted.

The epic of San Filippo may sound like peanuts compared with the struggle of Czechoslovakia, Libya, or any one of the large nations crushed by the boot of the oppressor. Yet it shows that the fire of freedom never dies. These two communities might long ago have agreed to consolidate, and some peacemaker may yet accomplish that, but never will the people of Aci San Filippo submit to having their autonomy arbitrarily taken from them.

Freedom can best be appreciated by those who lack it, yearn for it. Yet it would not be too much to ask free men to realize that they have one of the greatest gifts mankind can enjoy and that they must fight as hard to preserve it as those who lack it struggle to gain freedom.

POLITICAL CONTRASTS

Comparing the Republican and Democratic conventions, it is possible to reach the conclusion that a party out of power for a prolonged period, in this country, loses the art of political management.

The Democrats have had the same kind of a row as the Republicans and it gave every appearance of being deeper and of greater permanence. The dismissal from his candidacy of Vice President Alben Barkley by Jack Kroll of the C.I.O.-P.A.C.; the attempt of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Senators Blair Moody and Hubert Humphrey to purge the Southern states; the fight on FEPC and states rights could have produced a bolt. But such political operators as Sam Rayburn, Leslie Biffle, Jim Farley, Chairman of the National Committee Frank E. McKinney, determined that the party would not be split. To an astonishing degree, in view of the complex problems they faced, they succeeded.

The Republicans had no such mature leadership. It is true that the ovation for Herbert Hoover brought tears of joy and sympathy to many an eye, but nothing that he or General MacArthur said made any difference at all. Every effort that was initiated to keep the bitter quarrels off the convention floor was vetoed by Tom Dewey and Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. long before the Republican Convention opened. Herbert Hoover warned both sides of the dangers of fratricidal warfare in front of television cameras; yet, it was impossible to get the Eisenhower management to consider any form of compromise.

This is immature leadership, as, after all, the main business of a party is to elect its candidate and if events are permitted to occur on the convention floor which produce dissension and ill-will, the election is imperilled. The Republicans acted as though nothing mattered but the nomination; the Democratic leadership fought to preserve the party as was evidenced by the brilliant tactics of keeping Virginia, Louisiana and South Carolina seated.

Again, I contrast the two keynote speeches. General MacArthur's speech was his own views. Governor Dever's keynote speech was a party document which laid down the line for the campaign.

Again, I must contrast the positive presiding tactics of Speaker Sam Rayburn and his Republican counterpart, Joe Martin. Rayburn, in his very first words, assumed the full authority of his position and challenged all recalcitrant elements in the convention to behave like gentlemen. He killed a fight on the platform with courage and skill. His was a swift, sharp handling of difficult situations.

The Democrats had the advantage of having watched the Republicans performance, and seeing how horrid it was. They tried to make improvements. One improvement was to keep such characters as Governor Dewey of New York and Governor Fine of Pennsylvania—and the Democrats must have plenty of them too—from strutting and blustering and becoming featured actors in a ham show. They limited the time of speakers and made them stick to the arrangements.

The essential difference is that in the 20 years that the Democrats have been in office, their seniors have mastered the art of politics and political operations. And they want to stay in office. This was never more obvious than in the parade up to the rostrum, after Barkley's speech, of all the party leaders, including those who instigated Jack Kroll's disrespectful and ill-mannered nonsense about Barkley being too old. Incidentally, how old is Phil Murray or William Green or John L. Lewis?

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Blair Moody, Hubert Humphrey, Herbert Lehman and other rebels blatantly and vociferously marched to the rostrum to toe the mark of party unity. That did not happen at any time in the Republican Convention. There was no joining of forces even to try to end factionalism. There was a chance for that after Hoover's speech; it was missed. Then Dirksen made his attack on Tom Dewey, the convention booed Dewey, the bitterness bubbled over and is still bubbling. It could have been averted by political know-how.

Political maturity does not require subordination to the will of leadership. It does involve an understanding of goals and objectives. It does insist upon compromises and restraints in order that the goals and objectives may be achieved.

The senior leadership in the Democratic party grasped these essentials of party management; the Republicans ran away from the seniors and lost the advantages of experience.

It will be interesting and even important to se how these contrasts affect the management and results of the forthcoming campaign.

HEALTH INSURANCE

In these days, when we are all becoming more conscious about health and sickness, it is a real sign of the times to learn of the millions of people who are insuring themselves against the costs of ill health, with its expenses for medicine, physicians and hospital care.

An editorial in Post Graduate Medicine, on "The Growth of Insurance Against the Costs of Illness," gives interesting and authentic information on this subject.

"The most recent report on accident and health coverage in the United States (and this holds true in proportion for Canada) prepared by the Survey Committee of Health Insurance Council, indicates that at the end of 1950, there were almost 77 million people insured against hospital expense, almost 55 million against surgical expense, and more than 21 million against medical expense. The total increase of 1950 over 1949 was 17 per cent increase for hospital expense, 32 for surgical expense and 28 for medical."

The editorial states further that protection against medical expense, provided mostly by Blue Shield, the local societies and insurance companies, is new but its progress has been rapid. "The benefits range from payments toward the expense of doctors' calls in the hospital to comprehensive coverage of home, hospital and office treatments and examinations." Also, expense of laboratory, X-ray and other examinations for diagnostic purposes may be included.

Another important point emphasized was the great interest of people in covering themselves with insurance against hospital expense. This, no doubt represents the greatest need in the situation.

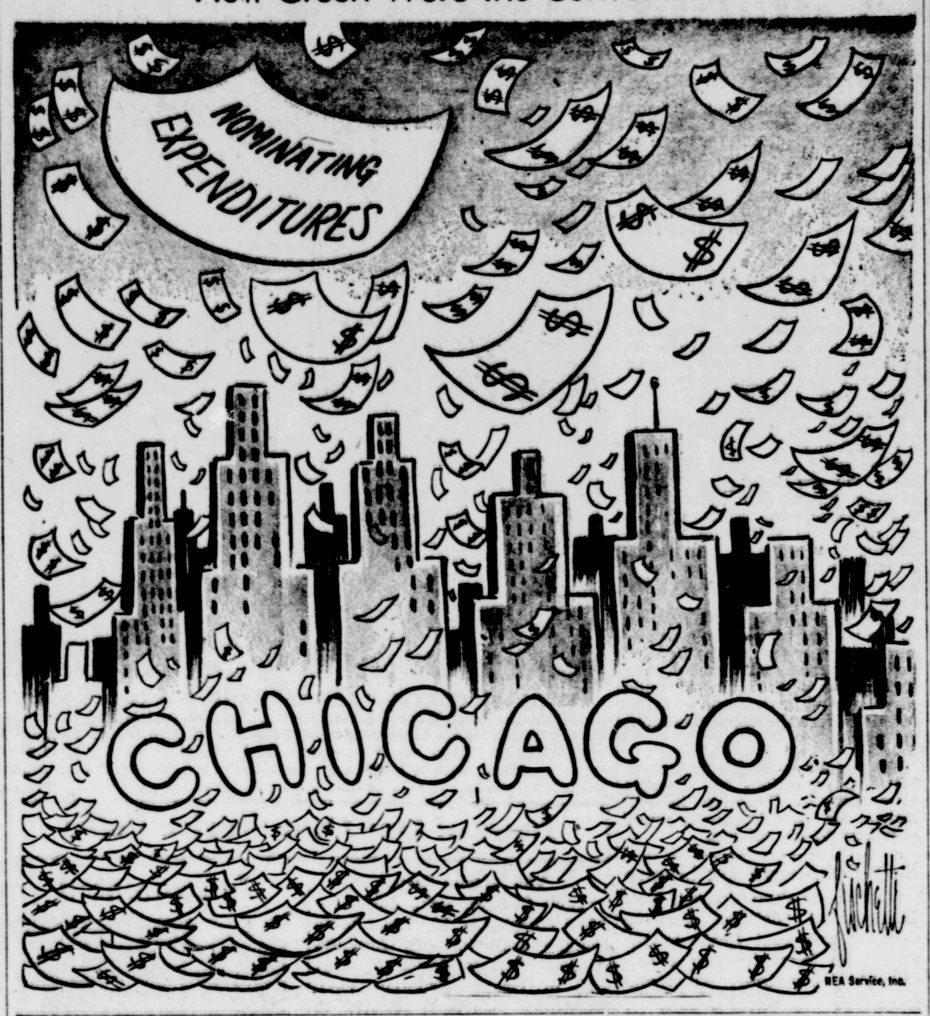

There is no question but that most of us feel that we can meet the expense of ordinary illnesses, but when we think of the expenses of hospital care, despite the great aid given hospitals by the community and the efficient business management now existing which allows physicians to give their entire care to the sick, we realize that insurance against hospital care is absolutely necessary for our peace of mind.

How Green Were the Conventions

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington — While the politicians have been watching the none-too-mysterious conventions, same other people, including the air force, have been watching a mysterious rash of flying saucers.

Furthermore, the air force, long skeptical about flying saucers has now made some official and important admissions.

Admission No. 1. Is that they have now detected something that looks like flying saucers on radar at the same time that people have claimed they saw flying saucers. In other words flying saucers are not just cloud freaks or hallucinations. If so they could not be detected on a radar screen.

Admission No. 2. Is that flying saucers could possibly be space ships from another planet. The reason for this admission is that it will soon be possible for us to build a space ship to visit the moon if we are willing to spend the money for research and construction.

Our current research into atomic power and supersonic speeds already has progressed so far that it is definitely known such a ship can be built, but the big expense would come from creating atmosphere inside the ship to support human life while traveling from one planet to the other.

Therefore if we are this close to interplanetary travel, air force officers admit that a more advanced civilization could be keeping this planet under surveillance through flying saucers.

Admission No. 3. It has not been announced, but scientific observation posts have been set up in New Mexico, where we are testing guided missiles, to track flying saucers also. A number of flying saucers have been seen in the southwest, and since trained specialists are already on the job in that area with the latest scientific gadgets, the air force has ordered them to watch for flying saucers and track them scientifically.

In addition, the air force has instructed its 24-hour air observers to watch not only for enemy planes but flying saucers. Furthermore it has set up special cameras on its radar screens to keep a pictorial record of flying saucers or any other strange objects flitting across the screens.

Finally, Wright Field, at Dayton, O., the center of all air force research, has been instructed to chart all flying saucer patterns, find out whether their light behavior is similar, and what characteristics they seem to have in common.

This was started only two months ago and no similar patterns have yet been reported, except for the peculiar fact that more flying saucers have been observed around U. S. atomic centers and around Wright Field than anyplace else. This could be because observers from another planet were interested in our atomic and air development, though the air force thinks it's more likely to be because the population around these bases is more sensitive to something strange in the skies.

However, while air force officials are taking every precaution to solve the mystery they also warn that the first flying saucers was seen by the prophet Ezekiel who reported seeing a flying wheel in the heavens.

The air force has tracked down thousands of fantastic reports from that of George Koehler of Denver, who reported blond beardless three-foot men from Venus, to the movies taken by Nick Mariana of Great Falls, Mont. The beardless men turned out to be a hoax, and the movies turned out to be pictures of two high-flying jet fighters.

So, while the air force is doing everything possible to solve the mystery, it still has its collective fingers crossed.

Steel-Negotiation Difficulty

The administration began working two weeks ago to settle the steel dispute so President Truman or Phil Murray could announce it at the Democratic convention. That may have been why a special price concession was offered the steel industry by the White House at that time, despite Truman's veto of the price increase proposed last March by Charles E. Wilson, the defense mobilizer who resigned after Truman reversed him.

Here is the inside story of the negotiation which began two weeks before the convention and at first blew up in smoke.

About a week before the convention U. S. Steel's Ben Fairless went to the White House and informed Defense Mobilizer John Steelman: "If you'll give us a worth-while price increase, I will guarantee to have the strike settled within one hour of my return to Pittsburgh."

"What do you call worth while, Mr. Fairless?" Steelman asked.

Fairless said he wanted a price boost averaging $5.65 for all types of steel.

Steelman finally gave Fairless an assurance that the government would permit the $5.65 boost, then urged Fairless to return to Pittsburgh immediately to settle the strike "within an hour" as promised.

Steelman confidently passed the good news on to both Roger Putnam and Ellis Arnall.

The next day, however, Steelman was abruptly surprised by a long distance call from Fairless. "I can't settle this strike for $5.65-per-ton increase," he said. "The union has just increased its demands. I'll need a better price boost."

Steelman then phoned Phil Murray to ask about the "new union demands" in blunt language, Murray told Steelman that the union had not altered its position one iota. Murray proceeded to prove his point by reiterating the union position.

It was at this point that Steelman became convinced that the steel companies were negotiating in bad faith, and were not out to settle the strike but to get all the traffic would bear.

Economic Stabilizer Putnam, equally furious, told a private conference: "These steel people apparently think they can blackmail and doublecross the government. They're not going to get away with it as long as I'm here. As far as I'm concerned, they're only entitled to $3.50 a ton increase. They can wait till hell freezes over before they get any more."

How Will Voters React, What Will Be Things Influencing Final Choice?

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, July 28—Now that two good candidates for the presidency have been nominated, the question that most everybody is asking is how the voters will react and what will be the principal things influencing their final choice.

All too often in American political history, unfortunately even when one candidate is plainly superior to the other, the better man has not been elected. It is in the study of such campaigns that the answer must be sought to the 1952 contest. For issues sometimes dwarf the importance of the personality of the better candidate and better campaigner.

The most recent case in point was when James M. Cox, Democrat, ran against Warren Harding, Republican, in 1920. Nobody at that time thought for a moment that Harding was even in the same class with Cox so far as qualifications for the presidency were concerned. Harding had been a rather colorless senator while Cox had three times been elected governor of Ohio, a Republican state.

As for campaigning, Cox toured the country from coast to coast and made excellent speeches and a fine impression on the voters who heard him. Harding stayed at Marion, Ohio, and conducted what was known then as a "front porch" campaign. He made a few speeches to visiting delegations. His addresses were full of ponderous phrases and ambiguities.

Cox embraced the Woodrow Wilson record and championed the League of Nations which Wilson had sponsored. He started out just as Governor Stevenson has done this time by accepting the record of the preceding Democratic administration and standing on it. This correspondent was sympathetic to the Wilson international policies and was impressed with the ability of Cox.

Traveling westward to the Pacific coast, this writer left the Cox campaign train at the Pacific coast in order to make an independent investigation and, on returning eastward, discovered to his surprise that people didn't bother to ask about Cox or discuss his abilities—they were just fed up with the Wilson administration and wanted a "change." While there were some elements which were opposed to the league and this in certain states helped swing Irish and German groups from the Democratic party into the Republican party, the basic tide was one of irritation with wartime restrictions — economic discontent growing out of high prices and other disturbances produced by wartime conditions.

This writer found the tide running against the Democratic party in state after state and so reported each day, finally winding up in the week before the election with a prediction that Harding would win by a comfortable majority. But actually Harding's victory was a landslide—the biggest sweep the Republican party had achieved in all its history. In that election, incidentally, women voted for the first time.

Is there a parallel between 1920 and 1952? It is too early to answer that but the analogy is worth examining by the campaign managers of both sides because if they think the personality of the candidate and the virtues of one or the other are going to be controlling they have another guess coming. It is the issues which will count most and the relationship of those issues to the fundamental thinking of the electorate.

Do the voters want a "change"? Unquestionably they do. The Democratic National Convention accepted as sincere President Truman's desire to retire and selected Governor Stevenson. The Democratic stump speakers will argue this is a "change." So far as personalities are concerned they are right, but will Stevenson accept the Truman policies 100 per cent? In what respect will he change men and policies? Will he clean house at Washington and get rid of the parasites of 20 years?

Stevenson will be on the defensive on this sort of attack which apparently has already begun from the Eisenhower-Nixon camp. The Republicans in 1920 conducted a passive campaign—they had the support of the isolationists and the internationalists in their own ranks despite the sharp cleavage between the factions. When it was all over there wasn't much logic in what the voters did—they chose an inferior mind and an inferior character for the presidency and rejected a splendidly equipped statesman. But the people wanted a "change"—and they got it.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Chicago, July 24 — The judgment of a noted newspaper publisher many years ago that it is impossible to overestimate the stupidity of the American people has been put to the acid test in this year's conventions of the Republicans and Democrats. Vindication in lavish measure issued from the first act of this Idiots' Delight. Predictions were heard, however, as the frayed and sheepish Republicans slunk away to resume their wonted nonentity in Bridgeport, Burlington and Dallas, that the Democrats, being shrewd professionals, always thinking well ahead of the brutish reactions of the masses, would therefore renounce the traditional follies lest they nauseate hoi polloi and lose the election.

Television had come along fast since the shaky experiments of 1948 and the candid camera caught the Republicans in revolting flagrancies, most of them unaware that they were in the act. The Democrats would profit by the naive mistake and improvise a new decorum out of respect for the people's intelligence, taste and patriotism. This guess was unofficial and, as events have shown, entirely incorrect. On the contrary, being professionals with a long, consistent record of unrelieved vulgarity, personal and political indecency, insulting contempt for the Common Man, and uninterrupted success, they never doubted that the thing to do was to multiply the dose.

This judgment ruled their show from the earliest excuse for a lunatic rout through Alben Barkley's act of degradation, a spectacle of truly majestic ignominy, and on to higher and higher peaks of maudlin uproar.

True to the confident opinion of all who had followed his career, Barkley, in the fitting language of the prizefight racket, dogged it as he had in every other crisis in his political career. Yet there were some on hand as he loosed his first counterfeit bellow whose very tripes writhed with pity and scorn for a man so little sensitive to shame. Barkley had let Roosevelt and Harry Hopkins steal an election for him in a massive fraud as flagrant as the one which later sent Harry Truman to the Senate on his way to the White House.

In a moment of unwonted integrity and pride, he had cried out against Roosevelt's humilitating abuse, even resigning his leadership, but, thinking on the awful thing that he had done, was frightened into quick capitulation. These landmarks should have prepared the multitude in the hall and scattered in their millions across the land, for anti-climax when his time came to speak, against known precedents, however, even some journalists could not believe that Barkley would close his career without so much as a whisper against the arrogance and treachery of the union racketeers who thumbed him out of the contest.

But the real delight did not come till he had licked up the whole mess and wiped his mouth with his sleeve. Then the managers of this fantastic thing, to which the Americans entrust their lives, their fortunes and their paltry counterfeit of honor, really spat on their hands. They swarmed around the grinning old man, pumping his arm and even kissing his cheek.

Barkley reveled in his ignominy waving his arms and drinking deep the wormwood with the laurel flopping over his ears. It was a spectacle to wring the hearts of decent men, an old machine politician brutally betrayed by his accomplices, teetering drunk in sheer sensual ecstacy over a half hour of noise.

They need not have rubbed it in, but knowing that nothing could make him sick or move him to serious resentment, they dredged up Jimmy Petrillo, the tyrant boss of the Musician's Union, whose constitution makes his power absolute and his term of office equal to the term of his life, and made Barkley pose there with this smirking hedgehog, although it was the unions which had done him in.

Eleanor Roosevelt, notorious for many personal political enormities, had been thrown in their faces and her strange, terrible voice, like the gobble of a yardful of turkeys, whooped on and on in banal periods until she had had her say and another triumph over a people who fancy themselves proud, intellingent and great.

At the hot dog stand to the left of the hall in the rear, a man in a silly hat remarked to the little red-head behind the counter: "Mah Democratic party! And we got to listen to ol' hoss-face!" The little red-head's face broke into a sun-burst and she grabbed his hand with both of hers as the

Q—How do some trees protect themselves from heat and cold?

A—The eucalyptus holds its pointed leaves straight upward, with only the tips facing the sun. The manihot rubber tree droops each large leaf as noon approaches, and then folds it together like a tightly rolled umbrella. The black locust, with leaves of many leaflets, partly folds them on cold rainy days and at night to shut out chilly air.

Suppose you all attended the conventions, onehow or another, and came away either happy or downhearted; something like when we amble out of the ball park with a hatful of reasons why the home team is peaches or lousy, according to the score.

Whether pleased or disappointed by the political score, ain't it grand to live in a country where men can say their minds about each other, and their fellowmen can cheer or disagree, and speak their own minds too.

Only a madman or a knave would overthrow this blessed heritage which is ours; only a fool neglects his precious privilege to speak, fight and vote American.

Still there were people — and you heard them — who slurred the Chicago extravaganzas as wasteful tommyrot; disgusting antics by grown men and women who might better be about more serious business.

* * *

IT IS SWELL, I think, that in some fashion modern politics perpetuates the oldtime torchlight parades and village square bonfires, about which beaver hats and crinoline skirts assembled to enthuse over their candidates.

I think if moderns unglued themselves from their radios and got out more to cheer together at the local level, that better than 57 per cent of them would take the trouble to vote. Enthusiasm is infectious.

In my book the monkeyshines at the Chicago stockyards conveyed more genuine patriotism to the folks who need it than all of the arm waving spellbinders put together.

THE LAST FEW WEEKS have brought letters which express wonder that this column has ignored the boiling political pot.

Most disturbed is the critic who accused me of "fiddling while Rome burns." It is flattering to have even a single reader who believes one's pen sufficiently effective that it should not be "wasted on trivialities in such serious times"—as he put it.

The occasions have been rare when this column went political, in the true sense. It has not considered its occasional wallops at isms and ideologies which threaten our country to be political.

Strangely though, often correspondents look upon them as such, and write caustic letters in naive defense of some profitable job or racket in which they wallow at the taxpayers' expense.

* * *

FROM THEIR INCEPTION, which goes back nearly 50 years, these little visits with newspaper readers have deliberately aimed at what the critic calls trivialities.

But are the homely, commonplace, human-interest incidents of our lives trivialities? Aren't they life itself? Are they not the really enduring things which will linger in our memories long after we have forgotten who was nominated in 1952?

This column is dedicated to trivialities; in the belief that nobody adds less to the joy of living than the conceited, self-centered sourpuss who ridicules the interests and activities of ordinary people; who scoffs at the small time Americana which common men enjoy.

* * *

A WHILE AGO newspaper friends searched out 25 of these columns and published them in an attractive book. I was intrigued by their choice from the hundreds available to them. All but two were simple stories of squirrels, cracker barrel days, our children, a little spool crib, Will Rogers, Aunt Rebecca, Uncle Mort, my mother, and such.

The choice of the experts were tales of things that could happen to anybody. Those epistles over which I fretted, as over a thesis, were ignored; and when I did a job for Reader's Digest they slashed out most of the profound grist that I had dug deep to get.

So maybe, in these serious times, a little fiddling while Rome burns brings sweet music to bewildered ears, sweet memories to troubled minds.

Yet, we aim to please; so for those who feel that they must have a political column from this chronicler, here goes:

Youth and Defeatism

349 Clifton Ave.
Kingston, N. Y.
July 22, 1952

Editor, The Freeman:

Some of our youth graduating from school express pessimism over future prospects because of war.

This sort of defeatist psychology aids the enemy and breaks down morale here. Let's not forget, that in a war, the course for all the people is changed temporarily, but in a democracy the people, through economic and political organization, can change the social order following a war.

Defeatism would be understandable in a country where dictatorship controls the people by tyranny.

It must be overthrown by a strong determination on our part because in a democracy, defeatism betrays weakness, shirking our true responsibility.

Today's youth must endure discouragements, we must admit, but I don't think we are any worse than the masses were in previous generations engaged in a war.

"Discouraged? Think of Abrahame Lincoln."

It is nothing new in human history:

"When Lincoln was a young man he ran for the Illinois legislature, and was badly defeated. Then he entered business, failed, spending 17 years paying up a worthless partner's debts. He became engaged to a charming young woman—then she died. Entering politics, badly defeated running for Congress. He failed in obtaining an appointment to the U. S. Land Office. He failed running as a candidate for the Senate. In 1856 he was defeated for vice president. Two years later Douglas defeated him. But in the face of all this defeat, he eventually achieved the highest office in our government, President of the U. S."

This great "emancipator," whose name shall be remembered to the end of time, should be a living example in conquering defeatism.

Sincerely yours,
EDWIN J. HIGBY

Today the major events begin in the national bridge tournament at Cincinnati, and hundreds of famous bridge stars will spend seven or eight hours each day playing bridge and four or five hours each night discussing what might have been. The average bridge fan would probably be amazed to hear some of these discussions.

The hand shown today, for example, provoked quite a bit of postmortem pow-pow in last year's tournament. And the only hand that was considered worthy of discussion was the West hand—which would make the average player shudder but would hardly stir him to deep thought.

But the whole point of the hand is the selection of West's opening lead. If West woodenly leads the five of hearts (fourth best from his longest and strongest suit), declarer wins 12 tricks. He wins the heart in dummy, draws three rounds of trumps, cashes the top diamonds and gives up a diamond.

The rest is easy. Dummy can take the club return and cash the two good diamonds, allowing South to get rid of his two losing clubs. South then ruffs dummy's low club, and dummy is high.

If West opens a club, however, declarer makes only 11 tricks. East must get in with a diamond in time to cash a club trick.

This would be small potatoes to the average player for a very good reason. He plays only rubber bridge, and the difference of 30 points is insignificant. At tournament bridge, however, that difference of 30 points is just as important as bidding a slam on some other hand.

Why should West lead a club rather than a heart? Either lead has about the same chance to come through a king or an ace-queen in the dummy. The heart lead, however, is more likely to strike a short suit in dummy or in declarer's hand; so it is less likely to be productive.

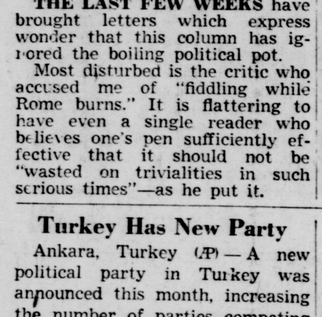

A further point is that East is bound to have fair strength if the opponents were correct in not even trying for a slam. If East had a good heart suit, he would have bid one heart over the opening bid of one diamond.

If East had good clubs, however, he might well have been unable to overcall in that suit at the level of two. Hence East is slightly more likely to have good clubs than good hearts.

The Most Powerful Gasoline Your Car Can Use!

It's Activated

TODAY'S more powerful engines require a highly complex gasoline to deliver their full power. There can be as many as 1500 different chemical compounds in a gallon of gasoline.

To select the best of these chemicals, and to arrange them properly to fulfill the needs of your car calls for the last word in refinery equipment and scientific skill.

It is Shell's manufacturing policy to make "The most powerful gasoline your car can use." Shell activates gasoline by splitting and rearranging petroleum molecules.

The result—Shell Premium—the most powerful gasoline your car can use. See the Shell Dealer in your neighborhood.

Tragedy Results From Outing

New York, July 28 (AP)—For the teen-age boy and girl, the afternoon started simply with thoughts of a few snapshots. But it ended grimly with the girl plunging to a heroine's death trying to save her friend's life.

Alice Bellber, 18, and Louis Martinez, 17, yesterday went to the roof of a Manhattan hotel (Marie Antoinette, Bradway and 66th street) where she lived with her parents.

Martinez, a 20-pounder, climbed on a skylight over an airshaft to pose for a snapshot. The glass broke under his weight, but he managed to catch hold of the frame as he fell.

While the girl's father and two other men tried to lift Martinez to safety, Miss Bellber ran to a floor below to a scaffolding in the airshaft.

Then the boy's grip failed. She seized his legs as he fell and was pulled down the seven-story airshaft. Their bodies struck a water pipe, and water cascaded into the pit.

Miss Bellber struck the bottom first, dying almost instantly. But her body broke the impact of the youth's fall. He was taken to a hospital in critical condition with multiple fractures and internal injuries.

Forest Hills Man Drowns in Maine

Damariscotta, Me., July 28 (AP)—A 69-year-old Forest Hills, N. Y., man drowned yesterday when his car skidded off a temporary bridge into the Damariscotta river.

Carl Peterson (of 68-12 Burns street) was trapped in the back seat when the car landed upside down in five feet of water.

His wife, Anna, 62, and daughter Frances, 28, who was driving, scrambled free and were rescued from atop the wreckage. Both were shaken up.

They were taken to Miles Hospital where their condition was described as good.

State police said that if the tidal stream had been at its maximum height none of the car occupants could have raised themselves above the surface from the sunken car.

Cause of the accident apparently was a skid on the bridge's rain-slicked roadway. The Petersons' light car plunged about 20 feet after breaking through a guard rail.

The trio was enroute home from a vacation at Blue Hill.

Peterson's occupation was listed as printer.

Dr. Philip Gregory of Boothbay Harbor, medical examiner pronounced death accidental drowning.

New York and Jersey Make Assistance Pact

New York, July 28 (AP) — An agreement to provide mutual welfare assistance in event of an atomic attack has been signed by New York state and New Jersey.

Each state agrees to provide care for up to 50,000 of the other's homeless.

The pact was announced last night jointly by Lt. Gen.. C. R. Huebner, director of the New York State Civil Defense Commission, and Leonard Dreyfuss, director of the New Jersey Division of Civil Defense.

New York and Connecticut already had made a similar CD welfare agreement. Huebner said New York CD officials are negotiating other agreements with Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

Brock Might Have Fired Shot Which Felled Desperado

New York, July 28 (AP)—The FBI agent surprised and mortally wounded by accused bank robber Gerhard A. Puff might have fired the shot which felled the fleeing desperado.

Puff, on the FBI's 10-most wanted list, was captured Saturday in a blazing gun battle at a Manhattan hotel. He pumped five bullets into FBI agent Joseph Brock as G-men sprang a trap.

Edward Scheidt, agent in charge of the FBI's New York office, said yesterday that ballistics tests would be made to establish whether Puff was felled with a bullet in the leg by Brock or by one of the dozen other FBI officers in on the capture.

Brock, 44, was shot in the back as he stood behind a door, covering an elevator in the Hotel Congress' lobby.

Took Rear Staircase

Puff, apparently wary, had taken a rear staircase to descend from his room, and he surprised Brock from behind. Puff emptied his .38 automatic at Brock, then leaped over the wounded agent, sprinted through the lobby as other G-men fired, and fell wounded on the sidewalk outside.

Scheidt disclosed yesterday that Brock, though mortally wounded, must have shot at Puff because the agent's gun had been completely fired.

The 38-year-old Puff apparently had become cautious after receiving word Saturday morning—probably through news stories—that his confederate, George Arthur Heroux, 22, had been captured by police in Miami, Fla., Friday night. Heroux also was among the 10 most wanted.

Heroux, spotted as he sought to pick up some belongings left in Miami previously, may have unwittingly given police the clue that led to Puff's capture, according to one report. It also was said that the hotel management in New York had become suspicious and notified the FBI. The FBI has not disclosed details leading up to the capture.

Charged With Killing

Puff, expected to be in a hospital at least a month with a fractured leg, already has been charged with killing a federal officer, a count carrying the death penalty upon conviction.

Two women, one 17 and the other 23, arrested at the hotel after Puff's capture, are being held in $50,000 bail each. The two, who said they were the wives of Puff and Heroux, are accused of being accessories after the fact in a bank robbery for which Puff was sought. They also are charged with harboring fugitives.

Miami police have said Puff actually was married to another woman.

Heroux's wife identified herself as Joan Evans, 23, of Everett, Mass. The other woman said she was born in Bangor, Me., and that her real name is Annie Laurie Moore. Police said she danced in night clubs using the name Honey O'Brien.

Seven Persons Killed in Crash

Arthur, Neb., July 28 (AP)—A B-25 bomber, carrying Air Force army and navy personnel, crashed in flames, reportedly killing seven persons, six miles northeast of here yesterday.

The lone survivor, identified by the Nebraska Safety Patrol as Col. John G. Eriksen, (hometown unavailable) the pilot, parachuted to safety. He was treated for burns, but was not hospitalized.

The bodies of six of the men had not been removed from the charred wreckage of the plane early today. The body of the seventh man was found about a half mile from the crash scene. He had attempted to parachute from the plane, but the 'chute failed to open.

As Pegler Sees It

two other girls rushed over to agree.

Now this was the sentiment of many a one within that very hall that hour. Hundreds of nobodies walked out to wander around the catacomb, to watch a sign-painter deftly painting picket cards for all comers, to idle the time away any old how until this monstrous offense was over.

It is not true that she was received with affection. Many were fiercely silent. Many women ostentatiously sat on their hands. Individuals in the catacombs said they hated her. They may have remembered Joe Lash and Alger Hiss; her interference with the committee which routed out the Communists and exposed her own defiant partiality to Communists and Communist fronts; the strange affair of the New York state cop for whom she wangled a safe, cushy job as lieutenant-commander in the navy and the strange intrusion of three New York lawyers to scare off the lawyer for the cop's wife when that lady swore to a divorce petition.

They may have remembered that Eleanor was the first one in the White House to get an $8,000 free mink coat; remembered the $40,000 aquamarine from the Brazilian government. A hundred or a thousand dark memories of this fat, squinting old woman's long campaign against the traditional morals, ethics and ideals of the presidency could have flashed across the minds of Americans watching these scenes.

Franklin, Jr.'s loud voice, his mastery of deceitful argument, his handsomeness, combined to frighten old professionals who knew of his dangerous associations and his ruthless opportunism. This fellow wasn't even a member of the party except by the skimpy technicality of a last-minute resolution passed by a typical Tammany committee. Yet there he stood before the convention demanding that others be read out of the party.

Even Jimmy, the not so gentle slicker who had taken Joe Schenck for $50,000 and Dave Smart of "Esquire" for $75,000 among many gaudy exploits, was up there following the old woman and Franklin, demanding that these objects on the floor nominate Kefauver. It should be noted, for whatever the statements are worth, that both Schenck and Smart later insisted that although Jimmy at first defaulted, in the long run, he paid them back.

These reminiscences of a reign gruesome in its consequences to American morality and confidence in government are not to be condemned as spiteful irrelevancies, however true. True they are, absolutely, and they were pertinent to these occasions when the party managers boldly backed the old editor's judgment that the stupidity of the American people could not be overestimated.

The surrounding debauchery, the garish extravagance of rich vulgarians posing as liberals and friends of the people, the festive swillings in grand ballrooms, all supported this decision. Not a word of reproach was heard from any quarter. True, the people have no voice, but it need not be conceded that they have the decency and the pride to object and the intelligence to know what fools they are.

PSC Makes Its Annual Report

Albany, N. Y., July 28 (AP) — Public utilities in New York state sought a record $77,829,000 in rate increases from the Public Service Commission last year and came away with $18,417,000 worth.

In his annual report to Gov. Dewey yesterday, PSC Chairman Benjamin F. Feinberg said reductions totaled $5,266,000 leaving a net increase of $13,151,000 for 1951.

The report noted that the 1951 rate boosts represented a big drop from those of the preceding three years. In 1948, the PSC approved net increases adding up to an all-time high of $42,803,000. They hit $31,056,000 in 1949 and $29,386,000 in 1950.

Observing that the "inflationary tide had overtaken the utilities," the PSC said that costs of equipment, materials and labor "cannot be continually increased without seriously affecting the cost of utility services."

The request for the greatest increase was made by the New York Telephone Company. It asked for and was refused boosts that would have brought 57 million dollars in additional revenue. In March of this year, the PSC authorized the company to tack 25 cents a month to residential rates and 75 cents a month to business rates.

PSC Makes Its Annual Report

Albany, N. Y., July 28 (AP) — Public utilities in New York state sought a record $77,829,000 in rate increases from the Public Service Commission last year and came away with $18,417,000 worth.

In his annual report to Gov. Dewey yesterday, PSC Chairman Benjamin F. Feinberg said reductions totaled $5,266,000 leaving a net increase of $13,151,000 for 1951.

The report noted that the 1951 rate boosts represented a big drop from those of the preceding three years. In 1948, the PSC approved net increases adding up to an all-time high of $42,803,000. They hit $31,056,000 in 1949 and $29,386,000 in 1950.

Observing that the "inflationary tide had overtaken the utilities," the PSC said that costs of equipment, materials and labor "cannot be continually increased without seriously affecting the cost of utility services."

The request for the greatest increase was made by the New York Telephone Company. It asked for and was refused boosts that would have brought 57 million dollars in additional revenue. In March of this year, the PSC authorized the company to tack 25 cents a month to residential rates and 75 cents a month to business rates.

Perfume Ingredient

Santa Ana, Calif. (AP)—Huntington Beach lifeguards Robert Isenor and Fred Swartz sighted a sick-looking whale recently and ran for two large garbage cans. The next day they filled the cans with a floating mass they hoped was ambergris found in the ocean near the Santa Ana river mouth. Ambergris, a secretion from whales, is used as an ingredient in the perfume industry, the lifeguards said. It is believed to command a high price.

Kindergarten Kids Count

St. Paul, Minn. (AP)—Are kindergarten children one-half a pupil each or one-quarter? Minnesota Education Commissioner Dean M. Schweikhard asked this question of state Attorney General Burnquist when it came to determining a basis for computing tax levies. The attorney general ruled "each kindergarten pupil attending half-day sessions throughout the school year constitutes one-half pupil unit."

TELEVISION ETIQUETTE

A difficult problem is described in the following letter: "I know that you have said when dropping in unexpectedly on friends in the evening and they happen to be watching a favorite program on television, it is polite for the visitors to take their places quietly and look at it. I am perfectly willing to do this, Mrs. Post, but when the program is over, don't you think it is rude of the hostess to continue watching program after program without asking her guests whether or not they would like to watch. I have a television set of my own and if I want to watch television all evening I can stay home, but when I go visiting I expect to spend the evening in conversation and not just say 'hello' and 'goodbye.' "

The people who turn television on the moment they finish their evening meal and keep it on until it goes off for the night regardless of the programs should never expect anyone to come and see them. Certainly no one would repeat your experience. I agree with you, however, that when they are looking at their favorite program it would be unreasonable to expect them to turn it off.

He Must Be Invited

Dear Mrs. Post: Should a friend's finance, who is a stranger to me, be invited to my wedding and reception? In other words, would it be wrong to invite her mother and her and not him? Or does a fiancee (or fiance) always have to be invited?

Answer: Correctly an engaged couple are invited everywhere together!

Announcement Important

Dear Mrs. Post: Do you think it a good plan to wait until nearer the time of our marriage to announce my engagement since I have my ring and yet it will very likely be a year before we can marry? Isn't it all right to announce our intentions anyhow, now? Mother seems to think not.

Answer: From every angle it is very much better to have people know your status—many awkwardnesses occur otherwise.

* * *

Is it good taste to use a printed card for acknowledging a personal kindness? Mrs. Post is sorry she cannot answer personal mal, but her leaflet E-21, "Model Notes," will help you. To obtain a copy, send 10 cents in coin to her, care The Freeman, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

The Stevenson Profile

(This is the first of a five-part series on the life of Governor Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois, Democratic nominee for president. The writer is Roger F. Lane, Associated Press staff writer.)

By ROGER F. LANE

Springfield, Ill., July 26 (AP)—In choosing Adlai Ewing Stevenson, Democrats bestowed their presidential nomination on a man who many times said he didn't want it.

Rarely has a national political convention given its top honor to a truly reluctant candidate.

That this was done in Chicago lends credence to a handful of prophets who all along have seen the balding, 51-year-old governor of Illinois as a kind of prairie Roosevelt, a man of destiny.

He has statesmanlike qualities—an incisive mind, vision, courage, eloquence and great powers of conciliation.

He has political sex appeal, too, this man of the rich, intimate voice tinged with an ivy league accent.

Compares With FDR

It is primarily his radio personality—attractive on TV as well—that evokes comparison with the late FDR. His aristocratic background and personal charm are other points of resemblance.

Stevenson make a pleasant but not a striking appearance. He is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 180 pounds and bulges a bit at the middle despite occasional tennis and golf.

His brown hair has thinned and receded, heightening a freckled forehead. His nose is slightly bent. Blue eyes that twinkle and a broad, mobile mouth often broken in a smile are his most appealing features.

He dresses conservatively but not stuffily. He likes to wear a brown tweed sports jacket, odd trousers and striped shirts at his office in the executive mansion. On the hottest days, he removes his tie, pulls off his coat and unbuttons his collar.

What, then, propelled this man of rather ordinary looks and habits to the threshhold of the highest office in the land?

Won by Record Vote

The biggest single impetus was the smashing 1948 political victory that vaulted Stevenson into the governor's chair of the country's fourth largest state in his first bid for elective office. He won by 572,000 votes, an Illinois record.

But back of that was an impressive trouble shooting career in federal appointive posts and one of those significant incidents that loom large when history is written.

In 1943, Stevenson was in Italy as head of a politico-economic mission by appointment of President Roosevelt. The ravages of World War 2 still raging, were on every hand.

Reading Stars and Stripes, the U. S. Army newspaper, his feelings were stirred one day by a story about a public opinion poll in the United States.

Seven of 10 parents polled said they didn't want their boys to enter public life.

"Think of it," Stevenson said later "boys could suffer and die in their cold, muddy, bloody campaign for the things we believe in but parents didn't want their children to work for those same things.

"I decided then that if I ever had a chance I'd go into public life."

Ever since, Stevenson has drummed on the subject.

He has called politics "the noblest career anyone can choose." He made it clear he wasn't talking about shoddy, corrupt war practices on election day or blind, vengeful partisanship.

People are "sick and tired" of old fashioned political feuding, he says, and don't care much about party labels.

He contends they want honest, sincere, courageous performance," and that if they don't get it, they'll change managers.

He tried to give substance to these expressions in organizing and directing the state administration in 1949. At the outset, he called for a "government consecrated to plain talk, hard work and prairie horse sense."

Installed Some Republicans

As a political novice, Stevenson had comparatively few strong party ties and installed Republicans in some key positions.

The major achievements of his administration were voted by one legislature controlled by Republicans in both branches, and a second under divided Republican-Democrat control.

Politics runs in Stevenson's family. His great grandfather was Jesse W. Fell, Illinois pioneer abolitionist and a close friend and backer of Abraham Lincoln for president.

His paternal grandfather was vice president of the United States from 1893 to 1897 under Grover Cleveland. His father was an Illinois secretary of state.

This heritage also accounts for the keen sense of public duty in Adlai, whose given name comes from the old testament and is thought to mean "the just." (Adlai is pronounced "Ad-lay," with the accent on the first syllable.)

Born In California

Although reared in the heart of the Illinois corn country Stevenson was born in California. The date was Feb. 5, 1900. His birth came during a brief stay of his family on the Pacific coast. His parents had left the permanent family residence in the midwest so Adlai's father, Lewis Green Stevenson, could bolster his health.

For a while, Lewis Stevenson managed Arizona gold and copper mines for Phoebe Apperson Hearst, whose deceased husband Senator George Hearst, had been a Washington friend of the first Adlai E. Stevenson when he was vice president. From this employment Lewis Stevenson went to Los Angeles, young Adlai's birthplace, as assistant business manager of the Examiner. The newspaper was a property of the late William Randolph Hearst famed publisher and a son of the senator.

The family migrated back to its seat, Bloomington, Ill., within the year.

While his father managed farms, young Adlai grew to boyhood. He had one sister, Elizabeth, who was two years older and no brothers.

During those years, Adlai acquired a reputation for good deportment. He developed into a serious, sensitive lad.

Mother's Stories Helped

His mother, Helen Davis Stevenson, gave him lessons in their large, comfortable home until Adlai was nine. She read to her children from the novels of Charles Dickens, William Makepeace Thackeray and Sir Walter Scott, and told stories from Greek mythology.

This instruction left a literary imprint that shows through today in the eloquence of his speeches.

Stevenson's father was doing well, and took his family south in the winter and to Charlevoix an informal Michigan resort on Lake Michigan, in the summer.

In 1912, the family went abroad and Adlai attended classes in Lausanne, Switzerland.

Three years earlier he had begun formal schooling in Bloomington. Because Adlai, then 9, was out of step with youngsters bent to the routine sooner, frictions resulted. Adlai has a "glass" nose and it was broken three times in kid fights. It is still out of alignment.

(The second article will cover Stevenson's career up to World War 2.)

Water Main Bursts

Binghamton, July 28 (AP)—This city of about 85,000 persons was virtually without water today because of a break in a main. Grover E. Rickard, superintendent of the water bureau, said the main broke when pressure in pumping was increased preparatory to shifting from steam to electrical control at about 12:45 a. m., EST. Authorities estimated that 90 per cent of the city was without water. The water bureau is repairing the damage. However, it figured the job would take up to 24 hours. Meanwhile, plans were being made to try to hook into the water supply of adjoining Johnson City.

Johnny Knapp to Play At Park Dance

The second in the series of city park dances will be held tonight under the pavilion on the upper level of Hasbrouck Park. Johnny Knapp and his orchestra will play for the dancing.

Urging the public to attend all of the dances but tonight's in particular, the recreation department describes the site as "one of the most picturesque views in the Hudson valley and embracing miles of Hudson river scenery."

The dance series is sponsored by Local 215 of the American Federation of Musicians in cooperation with the recreation department, and are provided through a grant from the Music Performance Trust Fund of the Recording Industry.

Perfume Ingredient

Santa Ana, Calif. (AP)—Huntington Beach lifeguards Robert Isenor and Fred Swartz sighted a sick-looking whale recently and ran for two large garbage cans. The next day they filled the cans with a floating mass they hoped was ambergris found in the ocean near the Santa Ana river mouth. Ambergris, a secretion from whales, is used as an ingredient in the perfume industry, the lifeguards said. It is believed to command a high price.

Kindergarten Kids Count

St. Paul, Minn. (AP)—Are kindergarten children one-half a pupil each or one-quarter? Minnesota Education Commissioner Dean M. Schweikhard asked this question of state Attorney General Burnquist when it came to determining a basis for computing tax levies. The attorney general ruled "each kindergarten pupil attending half-day sessions throughout the school year constitutes one-half pupil unit."

TELEVISION ETIQUETTE

A difficult problem is described in the following letter: "I know that you have said when dropping in unexpectedly on friends in the evening and they happen to be watching a favorite program on television, it is polite for the visitors to take their places quietly and look at it. I am perfectly willing to do this, Mrs. Post, but when the program is over, don't you think it is rude of the hostess to continue watching program after program without asking her guests whether or not they would like to watch. I have a television set of my own and if I want to watch television all evening I can stay home, but when I go visiting I expect to spend the evening in conversation and not just say 'hello' and 'goodbye.' "

The people who turn television on the moment they finish their evening meal and keep it on until it goes off for the night regardless of the programs should never expect anyone to come and see them. Certainly no one would repeat your experience. I agree with you, however, that when they are looking at their favorite program it would be unreasonable to expect them to turn it off.

He Must Be Invited

Dear Mrs. Post: Should a friend's finance, who is a stranger to me, be invited to my wedding and reception? In other words, would it be wrong to invite her mother and her and not him? Or does a fiancee (or fiance) always have to be invited?

Answer: Correctly an engaged couple are invited everywhere together!

Announcement Important

Dear Mrs. Post: Do you think it a good plan to wait until nearer the time of our marriage to announce my engagement since I have my ring and yet it will very likely be a year before we can marry? Isn't it all right to announce our intentions anyhow, now? Mother seems to think not.

Answer: From every angle it is very much better to have people know your status—many awkwardnesses occur otherwise.

Is it good taste to use a printed card for acknowledging a personal kindness? Mrs. Post is sorry she cannot answer personal mal, but her leaflet E-21, "Model Notes," will help you. To obtain a copy, send 10 cents in coin to her, care The Freeman, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

The Stevenson Profile

(This is the first of a five-part series on the life of Governor Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois, Democratic nominee for president. The writer is Roger F. Lane, Associated Press staff writer.)

By ROGER F. LANE

Springfield, Ill., July 26 (AP)—In choosing Adlai Ewing Stevenson, Democrats bestowed their presidential nomination on a man who many times said he didn't want it.

Rarely has a national political convention given its top honor to a truly reluctant candidate.

That this was done in Chicago lent credence to a handful of prophets who all along have seen the balding, 51-year-old governor of Illinois as a kind of prairie Roosevelt, a man of destiny.

He has statesmanlike qualities—an incisive mind, vision, courage, eloquence and great powers of conciliation.

He has political sex appeal, too, this man of the rich, intimate voice tinged with an ivy league accent.

Compares With FDR

It is primarily his radio personality—attractive on TV as well—that evokes comparison with the late FDR. His aristocratic background and personal charm are other points of resemblance.

Stevenson make a pleasant but not a striking appearance. He is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 180 pounds and bulges a bit at the middle despite occasional tennis and golf.

His brown hair has thinned and receded, heightening a freckled forehead. His nose is slightly bent. Blue eyes that twinkle and a broad, mobile mouth often broken in a smile are his most appealing features.

He dresses conservatively but not stuffily. He likes to wear a brown tweed sports jacket, odd trousers and striped shirts at his office in the executive mansion. On the hottest days, he removes his tie, pulls off his coat and unbuttons his collar.

What, then, propelled this man of rather ordinary looks and habits to the threshhold of the highest office in the land?

Won by Record Vote

The biggest single impetus was the smashing 1948 political victory that vaulted Stevenson into the governor's chair of the country's fourth largest state in his first bid for elective office. He won by 572,000 votes, an Illinois record.

But back of that was an impressive trouble shooting career in federal appointive posts and one of those significant incidents that loom large when history is written.

In 1943, Stevenson was in Italy as head of a politico-economic mission by appointment of President Roosevelt. The ravages of World War 2 still raging, were on every hand.

Reading Stars and Stripes, the U. S. Army newspaper, his feelings were stirred one day by a story about a public opinion poll in the United States.

Seven of 10 parents polled said they didn't want their boys to enter public life.

"Think of it," Stevenson said later "boys could suffer and die in their cold, muddy, bloody campaign for the things we believe in but parents didn't want their children to work for those same things.

"I decided then that if I ever had a chance I'd go into public life."

Ever since, Stevenson has drummed on the subject.

He has called politics "the noblest career anyone can choose." He made it clear he wasn't talking about shoddy, corrupt war practices on election day, or blind, vengeful partisanship.

People are "sick and tired" of old fashioned political facing, he says, and don't care much about party labels.

He contends they want honest, sincere, courageous performance," and that if they don't get it, they'll change managers.

He tried to give substance to these expressions in organizing and directing the state administration in 1949. At the outset, he called for a "government consecrated to plain talk, hard work and prairie horse sense."

Installed Some Republicans . .

As a political novice, Stevenson had comparatively few strong party ties and installed Republicans in some key positions.

The major achievements of his administration were voted by one legislature controlled by Republicans in both branches, and a second under divided Republican-Democrat control.

Politics runs in Stevenson's family. His great grandfather was Jesse W. Fell, Illinois pioneer abolitionist and a close friend and backer of Abraham Lincoln for president.

His paternal grandfather was vice president of the United States from 1893 to 1897 under Grover Cleveland. His father was an Illinois secretary of state.

This heritage also accounts for the keen sense of public duty in Adlai, whose given name comes from the old testament and is thought to mean "the just." (Adlai is pronounced "Ad-lay," with the accent on the first syllable.)

Born In California

Although reared in the heart of the Illinois corn country Stevenson was born in California. The date was Feb. 5, 1900. His birth came during a brief stay of his family on the Pacific coast. His parents had left the permanent family residence in the midwest so Adlai's father, Lewis Green Stevenson, could bolster his health.

For a while, Lewis Stevenson managed Arizona gold and copper mines for Phoebe Apperson Hearst, whose deceased husband Senator George Hearst, had been a Washington friend of the first Adlai E. Stevenson when he was vice president. From this employment Lewis Stevenson went to Los Angeles, young Adlai's birthplace, as assistant business manager of the Examiner. The newspaper was a property of the late William Randolph Hearst famed publisher and a son of the senator.

The family migrated back to it seat, Bloomington, Ill., within the year.

While his father managed farms, young Adlai grew to boyhood. He had one sister, Elizabeth, who was two years older and no brothers.

During those years, Adlai acquired a reputation for good deportment. He developed into a serious, sensitive lad.

Mother's Stories Helped

His mother, Helen Davis Stevenson, gave him lessons in their large, comfortable home until Adlai was nine. She read to her children from the novels of Charles Dickens, William Makepeace Thackeray and Sir Walter Scott, and told stories from Greek mythology.

This instruction left a literary imprint that shows through today in the eloquence of his speeches.

Stevenson's father was doing well, and took his family south in the winter and to Charlevoix an informal Michigan resort on Lake Michigan, in the summer.

In 1912, the family went abroad and Adlai attended classes in Lausanne, Switzerland.

Three years earlier he had begun formal schooling in Bloomington. Because Adlai, then 9, was out of step with youngsters bent to the routine sooner, frictions resulted. Adlai has a "glass" nose and it was broken three times in kid fights. It is still out of alignment.

Water Main Burst

Binghamton, July 28 (AP)—This city of about 85,000 persons was virtually without water today because of a break in a main. Grover E. Rickard, superintendent of the water bureau, said the main broke when pressure in pumping was increased preparatory to shifting from steam to electrical control at about 12:45 a. m., EST. Authorities estimated that 90 per cent of the city was without water. The water bureau is repairing the damage. However, it figured the job would take up to 24 hours. Meanwhile, plans were being made to try to hook into the water supply of adjoining Johnson City.

Boys Take Two County Highway Trucks for Ride

Two Ulster County Highway Department dump trucks were taken late last night by five boys who were apparently out for a "good time."

One was abandoned along the road when its emergency brake caught fire after it had been driven about one-half mile with its brake set. The other was driven about a mile when the boys—they told sheriff's men today—"got chicken" and took to the woods, leaving the truck behind them.

The sheriff's office was notified at 9:55 p. m. Sunday that the two two county dump trucks had been taken from where they were parked behind the Town of Olive garage at West Shokan. When last seen, they were headed toward Sundown, the report stated.

Jailer Wesley O'Brien notified Under Sheriff Clayton Vredenburg, who with County Investigator Arthur H. Brown and Assistant District Attorney James Abernethy immediately began an investigation.

Shortly before 1 a. m. today, two of the youngsters came out of the woods and were apprehended by Brown, who happened to be standing quietly on the road. Both under 16, the boys will be taken to children's court. Their names were withheld.

Investigation led authorities to suspect three other boys, who probably will be arrested.

The five boys suspected ranged in age from 13 to 18.

The Olive Fire Department was summoned when the fire caused by the overheated brake in one truck was noticed, but the slight fire was smothered with rags by one of the firemen. Apparatus was not dispatched and no alarm was sounded.

Damage to the one truck apparently was slight. James F. Loughran, county superintendent of Highways, said the trucks were valued at $1,600 and $1,000.

Two Men Escape From Matteawan

Beacon, July 28 (AP)—Two inmates of the Matteawan State Hospital for the Criminally Insane escaped early today after threatening to shoot a guard who tried to stop them.

Dr. John F. McNeill, hospital director, identified the escapees as Bernard Hubbard, 25, Negro, of Brooklyn, and William Bertolino, 18, of East Meadow.

McNeil said the pair slid to freedom from the attic of a three-story building, using an improvised rope of rubber hose and bed sheets.

A guard, Andrew Renovitch, said he reached through a barred first-floor window and grabbed the legs of one but let go when the man, not identified, threatened to shoot him.

Police roadblocks were set up throughout Dutchess and Putnam counties.

Per capita fish consumption in the United States is one-half that of England and one-third that of Japan.

Financial and Commercial

New York, July 28 (AP)—Stocks marked time today in a quiet market.

Price changes for the most part were small fractions in either direction with a tilt to the higher side.

The volume of business was at a rate of around a million shares for the entire day. Friday's total came to 1,130,000 shares.

Steels were mostly higher but quiet. Railroads were mixed rather narrowly. Automobiles were unchanged to higher. Radio television issues were higher.

The market started fast as weekend orders were brought to the floor of the stock exchange for execution. But that petered out within a few minutes. From then on the tape was quiet.

The initial price move was up. Then enough losses appeared to make the overall pattern mixed. Subsequent recovery put the list slightly ahead again.

Italy Awaits Anthem

Rome (AP)—Musical Italy has had no national anthem since World War II. An author of famed Neapolitan songs, E. A. Mario, tried to end this shortcoming. He wrote a new song which now awaits approval by Italy's professor President Luigi Einaudi. Military defeat in World War 2 ended the "Royal March" and "Giovinezza" as two national anthems. Since then the country has stood to attention to an old-time revolutionary song called the "Hymn of Mameli." Because of its revolutionary background, the hymn was never recognized as an official anthem.

Boys Take Two County Highway Trucks for Ride

Two Ulster County Highway Department dump trucks were taken late last night by five boys who were apparently out for a "good time."

One was abandoned along the road when its emergency brake caught fire after it had been driven about one-half mile with its brake set. The other was driven about a mile when the boys —they told sheriff's men today— "got chicken" and took to the woods, leaving the truck behind them.

The sheriff's office was notified at 9:55 p. m. Sunday that the two two county dump trucks had been taken from where they were parked behind the Town of Olive garage at West Shokan. When last seen, they were headed toward Sundown, the report stated.

Jailer Wesley O'Brien notified Under Sheriff Clayton Vredenburg, who with County Investigator Arthur H. Brown and Assistant District Attorney James Abernethy immediately began an investigation.

Shortly before 1 a. m. today, two of the youngsters came out of the woods and were apprehended by Brown, who happened to be standing quietly on the road. Both under 16, the boys will be taken to children's court. Their names were withheld.

Investigation led authorities to suspect three other boys, who probably will be arrested.

The five boys suspected ranged in age from 13 to 18.

The Olive Fire Department was summoned when the fire caused by the overheated brake in one truck was noticed, but the slight fire was smothered with rags by one of the firemen. Apparatus was not dispatched and no alarm was sounded.

Damage to the one truck apparently was slight. James F. Loughran, county superintendent of Highways, said the trucks were valued at $1,600 and $1,000.

Two Men Escape From Matteawan

Beacon, July 28 (AP)—Two inmates of the Matteawan State Hospital for the Criminally Insane escaped early today after threatening to shoot a guard who tried to stop them.

Dr. John F. McNeill, hospital director, identified the escapees as Bernard Hubbard, 25, Negro, of Brooklyn, and William Bertolino, 18, of East Meadow.

McNeil said the pair slid to freedom from the attic of a three-story building, using an improvised rope of rubber hose and bed sheets.

A guard, Andrew Renovitch, said he reached through a barred first-floor window and grabbed the legs of one but let go when the man, not identified, threatened to shoot him.

Police roadblocks were set up throughout Dutchess and Putnam counties.

Per capita fish consumption in the United States is one-half that of England and one-third that of Japan.

John B. Gillen

Funeral services for John B. Gillen were held on Saturday at 11:30 a. m. from the Jenson and Deegan funeral home and at 12 p. m. from St. Joseph's Church where a high Mass of requiem was offered for the repose of his coul by the Rev. During the bereavement hundreds of friends, relatives and neighbors called at the funeral home. In addition to many floral pieces there were many Mass cards. On Friday evening the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Stephen P. Connelly called at the funeral home and led the large assemblage of friends and relatives in the recitation of the Rosary. Bearers were Ray Herrick; Joseph Conlin; Edward Elliott and Arthur Floyd. Burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's Cemetery where the Rev. James V. Keating gave the final blessing.

Financial and Commercial

New York, July 28 (AP)—Stocks marked time today in a quiet market.

Price changes for the most part were small fractions in either direction with a tilt to the higher side.

The volume of business was at a rate of around a million shares for the entire day. Friday's total came to 1,130,000 shares.

Steels were mostly higher but quiet. Railroads were mixed rather narrowly. Automobiles were unchanged to higher. Radio television issues were higher.

The market started fast as weekend orders were brought to the floor of the stock exchange for execution. But that petered out within a few minutes. From then on the tape was quiet.

The initial price move was up. Then enough losses appeared to make the overall pattern mixed. Subsequent recovery put the list slightly ahead again.

Yankees Edge Giants, 9-8, to Capture First Half in Esopus League

Counter-Rally With Two in 6th For Close Win

Second Half Race Starts Wednesday

"Break up the Yankees!"

That's the warcry echoing about Ross Park in Port Ewen, following the Yankees' 9 to 8 squeaker over the Giants Saturday for the first half pennant in the Town of Esopus Little League.

The Yankees, ahead once by 7-0 and later trailing by 8-7, broke the hearts of the opposition with a two-run rally in the bottom of the sixth to gain the first leg on the seasonal title.

The Giants had scored twice in the fifth and then rushed six runs across the plate in the top of the sixth. The one-run margin might have seemed enough to some of the anti-Yankee rooters but the hopes were quickly snuffed out when the winners quickly scored twice in their half.

Pratt Wins Game

Nat Pratt survived a nine-hit jolting and the Giants' sixth-inning uprising to be returned the winner for the Yankees, who played their strikeout artist, Joe "Bolo" Beaver in centerfield and the cleanup spot.

Chuck Whittaker, the losing pitcher, was raked for 13 hits by the Yankees, including Stan Roberts' third homer of the season with one aboard in the first inning.

Stars Deliver

The meat of the Yankee batting order delivered consistently, with Al McIntosh, Nat Pratt, Joe Beaver and Stan Roberts each getting two hits. Bob Robinson also contributed two hits in the No. 8 batting spot.

Ken Shaver kept the Giants in the ball game with a pair of doubles and a single and Paul Thomas stroked two singles.

Chuck Whittaker and Bill McCabe of the Giants and Al McIntosh of the Yankees pounded triples. Pratt aided his own cause with a pair of doubles, while McIntosh and Beaver also had two baggers.

The second round gets under way Wednesday with a game between the Indians and Dodgers. All weekend games will be played on Saturday and Sunday evening for the remainder of the season it has been announced.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Batting—Luke Easter, Indians, hammered a three-run homer in the eighth inning to give Cleveland a 3-2 second-game victory over Washington after the Indians had taken the opener, 3-1.

Pitching—Bobby Shantz, Athletics, pitched the Philadelphia Athletics to a 3-1, five-hit triumph over the Chicago White Sox for his 18th victory of the season. The A's also won the second game of the doubleheader, 9-3.

OLYMPIAN HEIGHTS—Canada's Alice Whitty opened her mouth and flattened out clearing the high-jump bar at Elaintarhan Sports Ground remaining in tune for the Olympic Games. Russian canoeists Arechenko, fore, and Perevochekov dug paddles into the choppy water at Taivallanti. Texas A. and M.'s Darrow Hooper cocked his arm, rested the shot against his stern jaw, and wound up for prodigious puts in Helsinki. (NEA)

Japanese Swimmers Set Records In Olympic Qualifying Events

Finnish Climate Superchafges Athletes For Olympic Records

Helsinki, July 28 (AP)—Everything from the invigorating Finnish air to the appearance of the Russians was credited today for the dizzy, eight-day assault on Olympic track and field records.

During the mad, almost unbelievable week, 27 Olympic records were smashed and two tied. Nine world marks tumbled and another was equalled.

One statistician figured that overall, counting the various heats and duplicate efforts in such things as the shot and pole vault, Olympic records were broken a total of 151 times.

Everybody is asking: Why?

"I have only one word for it," said Brutus Hamilton, slow-talking head coach of the U. S. track and field forces who dominated the meet. "That word is 'athletes.'

"I think our team is the greatest Olympic team ever assembled. Other countries came in with finely tuned and excellent competitors. Competition was stiff, conditions were favorable and records had to result."

Dan Ferris, guiding father of the U. S. Amateur Athletic Union, had another explanation.

"I think it's this climate here," he said. "There's something about the air here that will make a man do better than he's ever done before. It's invigorating."

Nipponese Are Up To Their Old Tricks

Helsinki, July 28 (AP)—Japan's swimmers, who performed so sensationally in the 1936 Olympic games, resumed their place in the Olympic spotlight today, taking over the record-breaking roles that American track and field stars relinquished.

The Japanese 800-meter freestyle team smashed the third Olympic swimming record in three days of competition in the Olympic pool by winning its qualifying heat in eight minutes, 42.1 seconds. This broke the mark of 8:46 established by the United States team in 1948 and carried out the pattern of record-wrecking that has marked every day of the 1952 Olympic games.

The youthful Japanese team was composed of Yoshihiro Hamaguchi, Hiroshi Sazuki, Toru Goto and Teigiro Tanikawa.

The United States team also qualified comfortably for tomorrow's finals along with Sweden, Hungary, South Africa, Argentina, France and Great Britain.

Other Olympic swimming records broken so far are the men's 100 meters free style, in which Clark Scholes of Highland Park, Mich., was timed in 57.1 seconds in a heat en route in winning the first tank championship for America, and the women's 200 meters breaststroke. Two Hungarian women, Eva Szekely and Eva Novak, have turned in Olympic record times of 2:54 in trials. The final is scheduled tomorrow.

Otherwise it was a quiet morning on the Olympic front.

Brazil's basketball team trounced Chile in the first game of the semi-final round-robin competition, which will be featured later today by the first meeting between the United States and Russia.

American fencer Edward Vebell of New York was eliminated in the semi-final round of men's individual epee competition.

In canoeing, Michael Budrock of New York and John Eiseman of Silver Spring, Md., both failed to qualify in the preliminary heats of the 1,000 meters kayak race.

Frank Havens of Vienna, Va., winner of the 1,000 meters Canadian singles canoeing championship yesterday, qualified for the final of the 1,000 meters Canadian singles event by finishing third in his heat, won by Jean Molle of France.

Frank Krick and John Haas of Philadelphia qualified in the Canadian doubles race, also with a third place.

In cycling Steve Hronjak of Cleveland failed to qualify in the 1,000 meter scratch race. He was third behind J. A. J. Hizelendoorn of Holland as only heat winners qualified for the quarter finals. Given a second chance to qualify in a "repechange," he came in fourth.

Marjorie Haines of Gwynedd Valley, Pa., only feminine member of the equestrian team, turned in an impressive performance at the start of the dressage competition—a test of control of her mount. Results will not be known until all 27 competitors have put their horses through the intricate paces.

Track and field competition—always the showpiece of the Olympic Games—ended a record-breaking run yesterday. Twenty-seven new Olympic marks were stamped into the record books. Only six old records withstood the onslaught of the most talented field ever assembled.

Nine world records were beaten and these probably will be accepted as official when the International Amateur Athletic Federation holds its annual meeting today.

American Cuppers Meet Cuba Next

Cincinnati, July 28 (AP)—The United States Davis Cup tennis team, probably with at least a couple of new faces in the lineup, will move on to Havana this week for second round matches against Cuba.

A foursome consisting of Billy Talbert of New York; Gardner Mulloy of Miami, Fla.; Vic Seixas of Philadelphia and Art Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., yesterday completed the job of giving Japan's team a 5 to 0 beating in the first round at the Cincinnati Tennis Club.

The matches against Cuba are scheduled for next week-end.

United States Lawn Tennis Association officials in New York are expected to announce today the makeup of the team which will meet Cuba.

Seixas and Larsen registered the United States' closing singles victories over Japan yesterday in heat that was more than 100 degrees on the sun-baked court.

And the triumphs were as different as possible.

Seixas never was threatened as he out-gunned Fumiteru Nakano in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2.

The erratic Larsen chose to play it soft and easy with Atsush Miyagi and that was the kind of a game the 20-year-old Japanese likes best. After almost two and a half hours of play Larsen finally got out with a 6-2, 3-6, 6-1, 5-7, 6-3 triumph.

Hinnerschitz Cracks Two Track Records

Harrington, Del., July 28 (AP)—Tommy Hinnerschitz of Reading, Pa., holds the auto racing title for the Harrington track for the third straight year.

The Reading speedster racked up two records in winning the event Saturday with Johnny Parsons of Van Nuys, Calif., second and Bill Schindler of Freeport, L. I., third.

Hinnerschitz turned the track—one-half mile on horse dirt, in 23.75 seconds for one record. He won his qualifying heat of four miles in three minutes, 51 seconds for the other track record.

How to Spot Woodchucks

By WARREN PAGE
(Shooting Editor)

Some scientific gent has written that in New England alone the woodchuck population approaches 200,000,000. I don't know quite how he figures that out, but if we eliminate all the densely wooded and settled sections of those small states, the pasture population is terrific.

There are certainly a lot of chucks—and if we added in the members of the Marmota group that whistle in the states west of the Mississippi, there are an awful lot.

Yet some people can't find either woodchucks or rock-chucks, the latter the racier yellow-bellied varmints of the Rocky Mountains, even when they are common. Apparently they don't know what to look for.

In early spring, before the grass has grown chuck-high, seeing Marmota Monax is a cinch. He has little or no cover for his daytime foraging expeditions. Furthermore, soon after snow-melt the chucks are gallivanting around in mating activities with complete disregard of danger.

Even before the first cutting of hay, however, you can mark down likely woodchuck fields for your expedition with a varmint rifle—which shouldn't be until the youngsters are weaned in June.

A rock outcropping in pasture land or a few acres of alfalfa are sure to show diggings; a bump surrounded by darker vegetation means a chuck hole. So does a little pile of shale dirt, even if you can't spot the burrow entrance.

Don't waste time in swampy sections, or in sandy areas where the chuck's tunnel would collapse on him. He generally prefers shale or rocky soil to soft loam, in order to discourage excavation-minded farm dogs. Hedgerows, stone walls, the knees of stumps and the corners of boulders will often be marked by burrow entrances. And if you can spot the hole, eventually you'll spot the chuck.

His residence—usually a private one for mature chucks—must be near feed areas. If you find evidence of diggings near an acreage of clover, alfalfa or truck gardens, whistle sharply once or twice. Even the deep brunette or black chucks occasionally found in the east are as curious as their blonde western cousins, and they'll come up for a look-see.

The cliff apartments favored by the mountain chucks are likewise usually near feed patches, just under the break of a ledge or canyon edge, sometimes in a slide rock, where a bear would have a tough job digging out a metal marmot. Since the rock-chuck's furry hide is close in color to his home rock-pile, you need good optics to spot him, just as you do to pick an eastern chuck out of a stone wall.

Even with a multi-power scope on your varmint rifle, good binoculars, rated at 6x30, 7x35, 8x30 or 9x35 are a must for efficient chuck spotting. The human eye is just not good enough, without optical assistance.

A spotting scope of 20 magnifications is very handy for ultra-long-range operations, as much for spotting your buddy's shot as for finding game. It certainly will have great usefulness in the check-targeting of your rifle that every smart varmint hunter takes care of before he starts out to look for chucks.

The SCOREBoard

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

This is a tale of two southpaws. One leads the National League pitchers. The other leads the American League pitchers.

One is tall, lanky and clever. He is Preacher Roe. The other is short, slight and also very clever. He is Bobby Shantz,

Roe has not lost a single game all year. As a matter of fact, Roe has not dropped a decision since Sept. 27, 1951. On the other hand, Shantz has lost three games. His most recent defeat came on July 6 last. Roe has won seven straight, Shantz only four.

Offhand, one would opine that both Roe and Shantz are quite the goods out on the mound. But this Preacher—he must be something special.

Roe pitches for the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers. His record is 7-0. He has made 17 starts but finished only six. Three times he's failed to last the first inning. Twice he got only one man out. Eleven times he was either kayoed or yanked for a pinch hitter, but always he was bailed out by a Dodger counter rally and was saved from defeat.

Shantz Wins 18th

Shantz pitches for the Philadelphia Athletics. His record for the sixth place club is 18-3. He has made 21 starts and finished 19 of them. Once he lasted five innings and once he lasted four.

Roe and Shantz pitched yesterday. The 34-year-old Preacher took an early shower in the sixth inning with Brooklyn trailing the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2. The Dodgers tied the score at 3-3 but the Cards tallied in the ninth to win their third straight from the Brooks, 4-3. Johnny Rutherford was tagged with the defeat.

Shantz, the 25-year-oldster from Pottstown, Pa., turned in a five-hitter, going all the way to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 3-1, in the first game of a doubleheader. The Athletics also won the second, 9-3.

Yesterday was quite a day for southpaws. Harry (The Cat) Brecheen was awarded the victory over Brooklyn, his first over the Dodgers since July 29, 1948. Harry Perkowski snapped New York's five-game winning streak, pitching the Cincinnati Reds to an 11-4 triumph over the Giants. The scheduled second game was postponed by rain, leaving the Giants still 4½ games behind the Dodgers.

Hoeft Stops Yanks

Billy Hoeft, 20-year-old Detroit lefthander, handed the Yankees their fifth straight loss, pitching the Tigers to an 8-3 triumph. The Yankees snapped their losing string, longest under Manager Casey Stengel, when rookie southpaw Bill Miller shut out the Tigers, 6-0, in the second game.

Other lefthanders to shine were Alex Kellner, who hurled the Athletics' second game win over the White Sox, and Gene Bearden, who pitched the St. Louis Browns to their third straight win over the Boston Red Sox, 8-1. The Red Sox took the second game of the twin bill, 9-3.

Cleveland used righthanders Bob Lemon and Steve Gromek to sweep a pair from Washington, 3-1 and 3-2, and climb into second place in the American League, 3½ games behind the Yankees.

Philadelphia's Phillies swept a twin bill from Chicago, 12-8 and 3-0, to wrest fourth place from the Cubs.

Vern Bickford won his fifth straight as the Boston Braves defeated Pittsburgh, 5-2, in the first game of a doubleheader. The second game was called after 11 innings because of darkness with the teams tied 3-3.

Marciano 2-1 Choice Over Harry Matthews

Expect 25,000 Fans At Stadium Tonight

New York, July 28 (AP)—Slugger Rocky Marciano and boxer Harry Matthews risk their careers in one daring gamble tonight for a September shot at the world's heavyweight title. Marciano is a 2 to 1 favorite.

Scouting from a ringside pew at Yankee Stadium will be Jersey Joe Walcott, the 38-year-old champion who has agreed to meet the winner in the fall.

Forecasts of fair, warm weather were counted on to bring a last-minute surge to the box office. The International Boxing Club expects to draw over 25,000 fans and $250,000 for the show.

There will be no radio, television or theatre television of this 10-round elimination bout, scheduled for 9 p. m. (EST). In the event of rain, it will be pushed back to Tuesday night.

For Marciano, unbeaten in 41 profights, and Matthews, who hasn't lost in 70 starts since 1943, this will be the real crossroads. After tonight, it's on toward the title or back to the clubs in Providence or Omaha.

Marciano, a swarthy 27-year-old from the shoetown of Brockton, Mass., is a crunching puncher who fights out of a crouch. A left hook to the body and a lond overhand right to the head are his best weapons. Rough and hard to handle, he is built like a wrestler with strong solid legs and short brawny arms.

Matthews, 29, is a classy stylist with 105 pro fights. A fine boxer with long arms and quick hands, he is a fine counter puncher, specializing in short sharp jolts to the body. The pride of the Great Northwest and his home town of Seattle, Matthews soared toward the top under the guidance of Manager Jack Hurley.

The price fluctuated a bit from 2 to 1 up as far as 13 to 5 over the weekend but is due to steady around 2 to 1.

Ken Wood's '62' Wins Palsy Golf Benefit

All-Star Benefit Game Set Today

Wet grounds following Sunday's shower forced postponement of the City Baseball League's All Star benefit game for Sal Misasi until this evening at 6 o'clock. Rival managers Bill "Pucker" Davis and John Schatzel said that the lineups would not be affected by the postponements. They said that all players would be on hand for today's contest.

The entire proceeds will be turned over to the Jones Dairy pitcher who was injured in a league game several weeks ago.

24 Years in National League
Written for NEA Service

Question: What National League batter drew 100 or more bases on balls for seven consecutive years?

Answer: The first guess of a lot of people is Eddie Stanky, but they're wrong. It's Mel Ott. The great Giant outfielder who became manager of the New York Nationals walked 100 or more times from 1936 to '42, inclusive. He had 100 or more passes in 10 seasons, the others being '29, '30 and '32.

Q. Has any American League player ever led the circuit in base hits two straight seasons?

A. Ty Cobb did in '11 and '12.

Q. Was Joe Gordon ever chosen the most valuable player when he was in the American League?

A. Yes, in '42. This despite the fact that he led the circuit in strikeouts, grounding into double plays and errors at second base.

Q. Who holds the big-league record for leading his loop consecutively in runs-batted in?

A. Joe Medwick of the Cardinals led the National League in runs-batted-in three straight years, '36 '37 and '38.

Q. What major-league pitchers won 20 or more games, pitching in both leagues the same season?

A. In 1902, Joe McGinnity chalked up 13 American League victories with Baltimore, eight with the Giants. In 1945, Hank Borowy won 10 for the Yankees, added another 11 with the Chicago Nationals.

Posts 86 Gross With 24 Handicap

Shooting the best competitive round of his golf career, Ken Wood led a field of 51 players to capture the Weathervane cerebral palsy benefit tournament with a sparkling net "62" on Saturday at Twaalfskill Golf Club.

Wood's total which earned for him the Alvin Hanmacher silver mug, was the result of two nines of 43 for an 86 gross. He had a 24-handicap pull.

Wood compiled his winning total Saturday afternoon and then sat back and watched more than half the field in a futile effort to oust him in Sunday's competition.

Austin Boyd reeled off a net 64, with 80 gross and 16 handicap for second place.

Tournament chairman, Floyd W. Flint, announced that more than $50.00 would be turned over to the local cerebral palsy campaign.

Other results:

Louis R. Netter, 83-18-65; Harold Styles, 79-14-65; Mrs. E. O'Reilly, 97-32-65; George Schneider, 77-12-65.

J. Lifiner, 82-20-66; Bob O'Reilly, 76-10-66; George Hughes, 68-2-66.

Dr. Joseph Jacobson, 77-10-67; Dr. Douw Meyers, 81-14-67; Robert Herzog, 80-13-67; Charles J. Tiano, 79-12-67; Charles Gaffney, 77-10-67.

Mrs. John Van Gonsic, 96-28-68; Clarence Beehler, 88-20-68; Dr. Robert McCaig, 78-10-68; Charles J. Turck, 78-10-68.

Richard Overbagh, 78-9-69; Bill Fuller, 83-14-69; Leafy Le Fevre 83-14-69; Al Flanagan, 86-18-68.

Hughes Wins Medal

George Hughes, the club champion posted the best gross score of 68. He fired nines of 33 and 35. The score is almost certain to assure him of the qualifying medal for the 1952 tournament. Scores posted in the cerebral palsy competition were certified as qualifying scores for the club championship.

Hughes' card:

Hughes' total, 68.

Outsider Cops Rhinebeck '50'

A rank outsider—Vinnie Becker of Red Hook—surprised a large field of veteran aces, including five previous feature winners, to capture the Rhinebeck Speedway "25" Saturday night.

Becker started the quarter-century grind in pole position and surrendered the lead only briefly to George Welch. The Red Hook pilot baffled such favorites as the Disbrows, Bob and Stan, Jerry Golden, Larry Shurter, Ken Goodermote, and Hoppy Jensen to stay ahead for his first 1952 Rhinebeck triumph.

Rhinebeck favorite, Larry Shurter of West Shokan, appeared well on his way to a fine evening after winning the first heat, but spun out just as the first semi-final was ending. He qualified for the feature via the consolation and pulled from scratch position to sixth in the main go.

Shurter, Byron Fisher and Ken Goodermote won the qualifying heats, with George Welch and Hoppy Jensen copping the semi-finals and Dee Carlson the consolation.

The added Demolition Derby again proved to be a big hit as six aging vehicles tore wildly about the infield, banging each other with gusto. Satch Johnson of Hartford retained the only car that survived the free-for-all and was awarded the '36 Olds as his "trophy."

Marra Beats Cherry For Met Golf Title

Ridgewood, N. J., July 28 (AP)—Joe Marra of Yonkers, N. Y., ignored rain, thunder and lightning as he defeated radio crooner Don Cherry of Garden City, Long Island, to win the Metropolitan Amateur golf championship yesterday.

Marra played steady golf throughout the 36-hole final over the Ridgewood Country Club course to win the close match one up.

Marra took a one hole lead at the end of the first nine but Cherry evened it up by the 18th. The crooner got hot after the intermission and took a two-hole lead into the final nine holes.

After tieing the match again, Marra birdied the 34th while Cherry slipped one over par to put the Yonkers golfer out in front to stay. He halved the final two holes playing it safe and won his first major title.

New Speed Record

Williams Grove, Pa., July 28 (AP)—Paul Russo, Hammond, Ind., beat out Bill Schindler, Freeport, N. Y., by feet yesterday in winning the 50-lap "All-Indianapolis" big car race in record time. Russo toured the half-mile Williams Grove Speedway in 22 minutes, 35.53 seconds, lowering the old mark of 23 minutes, 11.23 seconds set a year ago today by Troy Ruttman, Ontario, Calif.

Yankees Edge Giants, 9-8, to Capture First Half in Esopus League

Second Half Race Starts Wednesday

"Break up the Yankees!"

That's the warcry echoing about Ross Park in Port Ewen, following the Yankees' 9 to 8 squeaker over the Giants Saturday for the first half pennant in the Town of Esopus Little League.

The Yankees, ahead once by 7-0 and later trailing by 8-7, broke the hearts of the opposition with a two-run rally in the bottom of the sixth to gain the first leg on the seasonal title.

The Giants had scored twice in the fifth and then rushed six-runs across the plate in the top of the sixth. The one-run margin might have seemed enough to some of the anti-Yankee rooters but the hopes were quickly snuffed out when the winners quickly scored twice in their half.

Pratt Wins Game

Nat Pratt survived a nine-hit jolting and the Giants' sixth-inning uprising to be returned the winner for the Yankees, who played their strikeout artist, Joe "Bolo" Beaver in centerfield and the cleanup spot.

Chuck Whittaker, the losing pitcher, was raked for 13 hits by the Yankees, including Stan Roberts' third homer of the season with one aboard in the first inning.

Stars Deliver

The meat of the Yankee batting order delivered consistently, with Al McIntosh, Nat Pratt, Joe Beaver and Stan Roberts each getting two hits. Bob Robinson also contributed two hits in the No. 8 batting spot.

Ken Shaver kept the Giants in the ball game with a pair of doubles and a single and Paul Thomas stroked two singles.

Chuck Whittaker and Bill McCabe of the Giants and Al McIntosh of the Yankees pounded triples. Pratt aided his own cause with a pair of doubles, while McIntosh and Beaver also had two baggers.

The second round gets under way Wednesday with a game between the Indians and Dodgers. All weekend games will be played on Saturday and Sunday evening for the remainder of the season it has been announced.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Batting—Luke Easter, Indians, hammered a three-run homer in the eighth inning to give Cleveland a 3-2 second-game victory over Washington after the Indians had taken the opener, 3-1.

Pitching—Bobby Shantz, Athletics, pitched the Philadelphia Athletics to a 3-1, five-hit triumph over the Chicago White Sox for his 18th victory of the season. The A's also won the second game of the doubleheader, 9-3.

OLYMPIAN HEIGHTS—Canada's Alice Whitty opened her mouth and flattened out clearing the high-jump bar at Elaintarhan Sports Ground remaining in tune for the Olympic Games. Russian canoeists Arechenko, fore, and Perevochekov dug paddles into the choppy water at Taivallanti. Texas A. and M.'s Darrow Hooper cocked his arm, rested the shot against his stern jaw, and wound up for prodigious puts in Helsinki. (NEA)

Japanese Swimmers Set Records In Olympic Qualifying Events

Finnish Climate Supercharges Athletes For Olympic Records

Helsinki, July 28 (AP)—Everything from the invigorating Finnish air to the appearance of the Russians was credited today for the dizzy, eight-day assault on Olympic track and field records.

During the mad, almost unbelievable week, 27 Olympic records were smashed and two tied. Nine world marks tumbled and another was equalled.

One statistician figured that overall, counting the various heats and duplicate efforts in such things as the shot and pole vault, Olympic records were broken a total of 151 times.

Everybody is asking: Why?

"I have only one word for it," said Brutus Hamilton, slow-talking head coach of the U. S. track and field forces who dominated the meet. "That word is 'athletes.'

"I think our team is the greatest Olympic team ever assembled. Other countries came in with finely tuned and excellent competitors. Competition was stiff, conditions were favorable and records had to result."

Dan Ferris, guiding father of the U. S. Amateur Athletic Union, had another explanation.

"I think it's this climate here," he said. "There's something about the air here that will make a man do better than he's ever done before. It's invigorating."

Nipponese Are Up To Their Old Tricks

Helsinki, July 28 (AP)—Japan's swimmers, who performed so sensationally in the 1936 Olympic games, resumed their place in the Olympic spotlight today, taking over the record-breaking roles that American track and field stars relinquished.

The Japanese 800-meter free-style team smashed the third Olympic swimming record in three days of competition in the Olympic pool by winning its qualifying heat in eight minutes, 42.1 seconds. This broke the mark of 8:46 established by the United States team in 1948 and carried out the pattern of record-wrecking that has marked every day of the 1952 Olympic games.

The youthful Japanese team was composed of Yoshihiro Hamaguchi, Hiroshi Sazuki, Toru Goto and Teigiro Tanikawa.

The United States team also qualified comfortably for tomorrow's finals along with Sweden, Hungary, South Africa, Argentina, France and Great Britain.

Other Olympic swimming records broken so far are the men's 100 meters free style, in which Clark Scholes of Highland Park, Mich., was timed in 57.1 seconds in a heat en route in winning the first tank championship for America, and the women's 200 meters breaststroke. Two Hungarian women, Eva Szekely and Eva Novak, have turned in Olympic record times of 2:54 in trials. The final is scheduled tomorrow.

Otherwise it was a quiet morning on the Olympic front.

Brazil's basketball team trounced Chile in the first game of the semi-final round-robin competition, which will be featured later today by the first meeting between the United States and Russia.

American fencer Edward Vebell of New York was eliminated in the semi-final round of men's individual epee competition.

In canoeing, Michael Budrock of New York and John Eiseman of Silver Spring, Md., both failed to qualify in the preliminary heats of the 1,000 meters kayak race.

Frank Havens of Vienna, Va., winner of the 1,000 meters Canadian singles canoeing championship yesterday, qualified for the final of the 1,000 meters Canadian singles event by finishing third in his heat, won by Jean Molle of France.

Frank Krick and John Haas of Philadelphia qualified in the Canadian doubles race, also with a third place.

In cycling Steve Hronjak of Cleveland failed to qualify in the 1,000 meter scratch race. He was third behind J. A. J. Hizelendoorn of Holland as only heat winners qualified for the quarter finals. Given a second chance to qualify in a "repechange," he came in fourth.

Marjorie Haines of Gwynedd Valley, Pa., only feminine member of the equestrian team, turned in an impressive performance at the start of the dressage competition—a test of control of her mount. Results will not be known until all 27 competitors have put their horses through the intricate paces.

Track and field competition—always the showpiece of the Olympic Games—ended a record-breaking run yesterday. Twenty-seven new Olympic marks were stamped into the record books. Only six old records withstood the onslaught of the most talented field ever assembled.

Nine world records were beaten and these probably will be accepted as official when the International Amateur Athletic Federation holds its annual meeting today.

American Cuppers Meet Cuba Next

Cincinnati, July 28 (AP)—The United States Davis Cup tennis team, probably with at least a couple of new faces in the lineup, will move on to Havana this week for second round matches against Cuba.

A foursome consisting of Billy Talbert of New York; Gardner Mulloy of Miami, Fla.; Vic Seixas of Philadelphia and Art Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., yesterday completed the job of giving Japan's team a 5 to 0 beating in the first round at the Cincinnati Tennis Club.

The matches against Cuba are scheduled for next week-end.

United States Lawn Tennis Association officials in New York are expected to announce today the makeup of the team which will meet Cuba.

Seixas and Larsen registered the United States' closing singles victories over Japan yesterday in heat that was more than 100 degrees on the sun-baked court.

And the triumphs were as different as possible.

Seixas never was threatened as he out-gunned Fumiteru Nakano in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2.

The erratic Larsen chose to play it soft and easy with Atsush Miyagi and that was the kind of a game the 20-year-old Japanese likes best. After almost two and a half hours of play Larsen finally got out with a 6-2, 3-6, 6-1, 5-7, 6-3 triumph.

Hinnerschitz Cracks Two Track Records

Harrington, Del., July 28 (AP)—Tommy Hinnerschitz of Reading, Pa., holds the auto racing title for the Harrington track for the third straight year.

The Reading speedster racked up two records in winning the event Saturday with Johnny Parsons of Van Nuys, Calif., second and Bill Schindler of Freeport, L. I., third.

Hinnerschitz turned the track—one-half mile on horse dirt, in 23.75 seconds for one record. He won his qualifying heat of four miles in three minutes, 51 seconds for the other track record.

How to Spot Woodchucks

By WARREN PAGE
(Shooting Editor)

Some scientific gent has written that in New England alone the woodchuck population approaches 200,000,000. I don't know quite how he figures that out, but if we eliminate all the densely wooded and settled sections of those small states, the pasture population is terrific.

There are certainly a lot of chucks—and if we added in the members of the Marmota group that whistle in the states west of the Mississippi, there are an awful lot.

Yet some people can't find either woodchucks or rock-chucks, the latter the racier yellow-bellied varmints of the Rocky Mountains, even when they are common. Apparently they don't know what to look for.

In early spring, before the grass has grown chuck-high, seeing Marmota Monax is a cinch. He has little or no cover for his daytime foraging expeditions. Furthermore, soon after snow-melt the chucks are gallivanting around in mating activities with complete disregard of danger.

Even before the first cutting of hay, however, you can mark down likely woodchuck fields for your expedition with a varmint rifle—which shouldn't be until the youngsters are weaned in June.

A rock outcropping in pasture land or a few acres of alfalfa are sure to show diggings; a bump surrounded by darker vegetation means a chuck hole. So does a little pile of shale dirt, even if you can't spot the burrow entrance.

Don't waste time in swampy sections, or in sandy areas where the chuck's tunnel would collapse on him. He generally prefers shale or rocky soil to soft loam, in order to discourage excavation-minded farm dogs. Hedgerows, stone walls, the knees of stumps and the corners of boulders will often be marked by burrow entrances. And if you can spot the hole, eventually you'll spot the chuck.

His residence—usually a private one for mature chucks—must be near feed areas. If you find evidence of diggings near an acreage of clover, alfalfa or truck gardens, whistle sharply once or twice. Even the deep brunette or black chucks occasionally found in the east are as curious as their blonde western cousins, and they'll come up for a look-see.

The cliff apartments favored by the mountain chucks are likewise usually near feed patches, just under the break of a ledge or canyon edge, sometimes in a slide rock, where a bear would have a tough job digging out a metal marmot. Since the rock-chuck's furry hide is close in color to his home rock-pile, you need good optics to spot him, just as you do to pick an eastern chuck out of a stone wall.

Even with a multi-power scope on your varmint rifle, good binoculars, rated at 6x30, 7x35, 8x30 or 9x35 are a must for efficient chuck spotting. The human eye is just not good enough, without optical assistance.

A spotting scope of 20 magnifications is very handy for ultra-long-range operations, as much for spotting your buddy's shot as for finding game. It certainly will have great usefulness in the check-targeting of your rifle that every smart varmint hunter takes care of before he starts out to look for chucks.

The SCOREBoard

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

This is a tale of two southpaws. One leads the National League pitchers. The other leads the American League pitchers.

One is tall, lanky and clever. He is Preacher Roe. The other is short, slight and also very clever. He is Bobby Shantz,

Roe has not lost a single game all year. As a matter of fact, Roe has not dropped a decision since Sept. 27, 1951. On the other hand, Shantz has lost three games. His most recent defeat came on July 6 last. Roe has won seven straight, Shantz only four.

Offhand, one would opine that both Roe and Shantz are quite the goods out on the mound. But this Preacher—he must be something special.

Roe pitches for the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers. His record is 7-0. He has made 17 starts but finished only six. Three times he's failed to last the first inning. Twice he got only one man out. Eleven times he was either kayoed or yanked for a pinch hitter, but always he was bailed out by a Dodger counter rally and was saved from defeat.

Shantz Wins 18th

Shantz pitches for the Philadelphia Athletics. His record for the sixth place club is 18-3. He has made 21 starts and finished 19 of them. Once he lasted five innings and once he lasted four.

Roe and Shantz pitched yesterday. The 34-year-old Preacher took an early shower in the sixth inning with Brooklyn trailing the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2. The Dodgers tied the score at 3-3 but the Cards tallied in the ninth to win their third straight from the Brooks, 4-3. Johnny Rutherford was tagged with the defeat.

Shantz, the 25-year-oldster from Pottstown, Pa., turned in a five-hitter, going all the way to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 3-1, in the first game of a doubleheader. The Athletics also won the second, 9-3.

Yesterday was quite a day for southpaws. Harry (The Cat) Brecheen was awarded the victory over Brooklyn, his first over the Dodgers since July 29, 1948. Harry Perkowski snapped New York's five-game winning streak, pitching the Cincinnati Reds to an 11-4 triumph over the Giants. The scheduled second game was postponed by rain, leaving the Giants still 4½ games behind the Dodgers.

Hoeft Stops Yanks

Billy Hoeft, 20-year-old Detroit lefthander, handed the Yankees their fifth straight loss, pitching the Tigers to an 8-3 triumph. The Yankees snapped their losing string, longest under Manager Casey Stengel, when rookie southpaw Bill Miller shut out the Tigers, 6-0, in the second game.

Other lefthanders to shine were Alex Kellner, who hurled the Athletics' second game win over the White Sox, and Gene Bearden, who pitched the St. Louis Browns to their third straight win over the Boston Red Sox, 8-1. The Red Sox took the second game of the twin bill, 9-3.

Cleveland used righthanders Bob Lemon and Steve Gromek to sweep a pair from Washington, 3-1 and 3-2, and climb into second place in the American League, 3½ games behind the Yankees.

Philadelphia's Phillies swept a twin bill from Chicago, 12-8 and 3-0, to wrest fourth place from the Cubs.

Vern Bickford won his fifth straight as the Boston Braves defeated Pittsburgh, 5-2, in the first game of a doubleheader. The second game was called after 11 innings because of darkness with the teams tied 3-3.

Marciano 2-1 Choice Over Harry Matthews

Expect 25,000 Fans At Stadium Tonight

New York, July 28 (AP)—Slugger Rocky Marciano and boxer Harry Matthews risk their careers in one daring gamble tonight for a September shot at the world's heavyweight title. Marciano is a 2 to 1 favorite.

Scouting from a ringside pew at Yankee Stadium will be Jersey Joe Walcott, the 38-year-old champion who has agreed to meet the winner in the fall.

Forecasts of fair, warm weather were counted on to bring a last-minute surge to the box office. The International Boxing Club expects to draw over 25,000 fans and $250,000 for the show.

There will be no radio, television or theatre television of this 10-round elimination bout, scheduled for 9 p. m. (EST). In the event of rain, it will be pushed back to Tuesday night.

For Marciano, unbeaten in 41 profights, and Matthews, who hasn't lost in 70 starts since 1943, this will be the real crossroads. After tonight, it's on toward the title or back to the clubs in Providence or Omaha.

Marciano, a swarthy 27-year-old from the shoetown of Brockton, Mass., is a crunching puncher who fights out of a crouch. A left hook to the body and a lond overhand right to the head are his best weapons. Rough and hard to handle, he is built like a wrestler with strong solid legs and short brawny arms.

Matthews, 29, is a classy stylist with 105 pro fights. A fine boxer with long arms and quick hands, he is a fine counter puncher, specializing in short sharp jolts to the body. The pride of the Great Northwest and his home town of Seattle, Matthews soared toward the top under the guidance of Manager Jack Hurley.

The price fluctuated a bit from 2 to 1 up as far as 13 to 5 over the weekend but is due to steady around 2 to 1.

Al Barlick, veteran National League umpire, entered pro arbitering ranks in the Northeast Arkansas League in 1936.

All-Star Benefit Game Set Today

Wet grounds following Sunday's shower forced postponement of the City Baseball League's All Star benefit game for Sal Misasi until this evening at 6 o'clock. Rival managers Bill "Pucker" Davis and John Schatzel said that the lineups would not be affected by the postponements. They said that all players would be on hand for today's contest.

The entire proceeds will be turned over to the Jones Dairy pitcher who was injured in a league game several weeks ago.

Posts 86 Gross With 24 Handicap

Shooting the best competitive round of his golf career, Ken Wood led a field of 51 players to capture the Weathervane cerebral palsy benefit tournament with a sparkling net "62" on Saturday at Twaalfskill Golf Club.

Wood's total which earned for him the Alvin Hanmacher silver mug, was the result of two nines of 43 for an 86 gross. He had a 24-handicap pull.

Wood compiled his winning total Saturday afternoon and then sat back and watched more than half the field in a futile effort to oust him in Sunday's competition.

Austin Boyd reeled off a net 64, with 80 gross and 16 handicap for second place.

Tournament chairman, Floyd W. Flint, announced that more than $50.00 would be turned over to the local cerebral palsy campaign.

Other results:

Louis R. Netter, 83-18-65; Harold Styles, 79-14-65; Mrs. E. O'Reilly, 97-32-65; George Schneider, 77-12-65.

J. Lifiner, 82-20-66; Bob O'Reilly, 76-10-66; George Hughes, 68-2-66.

Dr. Joseph Jacobson, 77-10-67; Dr. Douw Meyers, 81-14-67; Robert Herzog, 80-13-67; Charles J. Tiano, 79-12-67; Charles Gaffney, 77-10-67.

Mrs. John Van Gonsic, 96-28-68; Clarence Beehler, 88-20-68; Dr. Robert McCaig, 78-10-68; Charles J. Turck, 78-10-68.

Richard Overbagh, 78-9-69; Bill Fuller, 83-14-69; Leafy Le Fevre 83-14-69; Al Flanagan, 86-18-68.

Hughes Wins Medal

George Hughes, the club champion posted the best gross score of 68. He fired nines of 33 and 35. The score is almost certain to assure him of the qualifying medal for the 1952 tournament. Scores posted in the cerebral palsy competition were certified as qualifying scores for the club championship.

Hughes' card:

24 Years in National League
Written for NEA Service

Question: What National League batter drew 100 or more bases on balls for seven consecutive years?

Answer: The first guess of a lot of people is Eddie Stanky, but they're wrong. It's Mel Ott. The great Giant outfielder who became manager of the New York Nationals walked 100 or more times from 1936 to '42, inclusive. He had 100 or more passes in 10 seasons, the others being '29, '30 and '32.

Q. Has any American League player ever led the circuit in base hits two straight seasons?

A. Ty Cobb did in '11 and '12.

Q. Was Joe Gordon ever chosen the most valuable player when he was in the American League?

A. Yes, in '42. This despite the fact that he led the circuit in strikeouts, grounding into double plays and errors at second base.

Q. Who holds the big-league record for leading his loop consecutively in runs-batted in?

A. Joe Medwick of the Cardinals led the National League in runs-batted-in three straight years, '36 '37 and '38.

Q. What major-league pitchers won 20 or more games, pitching in both leagues the same season?

A. In 1902, Joe McGinnity chalked up 13 American League victories with Baltimore, eight with the Giants. In 1945, Hank Borowy won 10 for the Yankees, added another 11 with the Chicago Nationals.

Marra Beats Cherry For Met Golf Title

Ridgewood, N. J., July 28 (AP)—Joe Marra of Yonkers, N. Y., ignored rain, thunder and lightning as he defeated radio crooner Don Cherry of Garden City, Long Island, to win the Metropolitan Amateur golf championship yesterday.

Marra played steady golf throughout the 36-hole final over the Ridgewood Country Club course to win the close match one up.

Marra took a one hole lead at the end of the first nine but Cherry evened it up by the 18th. The crooner got hot after the intermission and took a two-hole lead into the final nine holes.

After tieing the match again, Marra birdied the 34th while Cherry slipped one over par to put the Yonkers golfer out in front to stay. He halved the final two holes playing it safe and won his first major title.

New Speed Record

Half-Brothers Meet

Ogden, Utah (AP) — Two half-brothers, DeVon Worsley of Clearfield, Utah, and Jay LaVerl Worsley of Salt Lake City, met for the first time recently. The two met when Jay noticed he was working with a fellow who had the same last name as his. "Imagine how excited we were when we got to comparing notes and discovered we were half-brothers!" Jay said. "Neither of us had any other brothers or sisters." Fate, three wars and moving to another state were the events which teamed up to keep the two brothers separated. When the oldest boy, Jay, was still a youngster, his parents separated and his father moved to Idaho. It was there that DeVon, the younger boy, was born from a second marriage. Jay served a four-year hitch in the airborne infantry during World War II. DeVon returned from Korea and Japan recently after four years with the paratroopers. The father, John Harold Worsley, a World War I disabled veteran, has spent the last 15 years in the Colorado veterans hospital.

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A HORSE—Thoroughbreds in training never find life dull or uninteresting. Here a runner at New Jersey's Monmouth Park is shown in various phases of a day's activity. Up at 6 a.m., he blows out through the stretch, is rubbed down after the work. He revels in a roll in the sand, has his noon meal with the puppies, enjoys a quiet rest in his stall while awaiting the afternoon post time. (NEA)

The Freeman Hole-in-One tournament gratefull acknowledges receipt of a Newburgh entry. It comes from Wesley F. "Bo" Gill, pundit and itinerant golfer, who serves as sports editor of the Newburgh News in his spare moments.

Mr. Gill, who scored two aces at the Central Valley Golf Club, is a three-handicap star at the Wallkill Prison Golf Club.

A representative field with entries recruited from Wiltwyck, Twaalfskill, Woodstock and Shawangunk will try for the elusive ace next Sunday on the specially-constructed hole at Wiltwyck Golf Club. Tom Danaher, the club pro, and Homer Van Aken have done a nice job on this picturesque layout, a 135-yard drop shot that will be a fine test of iron accuracy. Shifting winds, if they develop, will make this a mighty interesting challenge for Mr. and Mrs. Golfer.

Folks seem surprised when you tell them that in three years of the Freeman tournament nobody has holed out for an ace. The truth of the matter is that Jim Dwyer's 2 feet ½-inch effort in the 1949 inaugural at Twaalfskill stands as the tournament record. The hole-in-one remains the luckiest yet most elusive achievement in golf. We should know.

In all the excitement about the department's ace—and those kind people in Woodstock certainly favored us with a royal celebration—the most amusing sidelight was Bob Browning's comment that: "After many years of careful preparation, the sports editor dropped a hole-in-one." How nice, Bob, but it was still more like the blind pig stumbling onto the acorn.

• The Nineteenth Hole:

Art Organtini and Ike Trowbridge are gratified by the enthusiastic response to recent "men's nights" at Wiltwyck. Dubby Raichle's popular victory in the Father Herdegen Memorial has vaulted him into the favorite's role for the 1952 Wiltwyck Club championship. Perhaps you see it that way, too, but isn't Bob Daley of Wiltwyck just about the most under-rated golfer in the city? He has turned in consistently fine scores for two years, was a standout in the Herdegen tournament, and would be even tougher if he had the opportunity to practice frequently. Leave it to Dr. Fred Holcomb, Jr., to bring out the best in the opposition. He recently posted his all-time best at Wiltwyck—a par 70—but lost to Dubby Raichle's brilliant 69. When Bill Van Aken set the amateur course record of 67 a couple of years ago, Fred played something like a dozen consecutive par holes and lost ground! Dr. Douw Meyers' new sartorial sensation—the cut-away-shirt—was quickly copied by Charles J. Turck. Our own Jack Crawford, the roving reporter, is experiencing the growing pains of the illusory "80." Boyer Gonzales, who swears by the golf of Texas, is leading the ladder tournament at Woodstock and has turned in several outstanding rounds of late.

Eugene Speicher, Woodstock portraitist, recently told us of an amazing incident that happened to him several years ago at the Masters tournament in Atlanta. It was interesting since it coincided with our own pre-introduction appraisal of the famous artist.

It seems that Speicher was sitting around batting the breeze with a flock of the big name pros in the Masters clubhouse when Ky Laffoon, the great middle west star of a decade ago, posed a question.

"And what do you do for a living, Speicher?" he asked.

"Why, I'm an artist," replied Speicher in a matter of fact tone.

"You a painter?" was Laffoon's incredulous reply. "Why, I thought you were a big business man or banker."

That's the same way we—and countless others—have sized up Eugene Speicher before the introductions. But he remains one of the greatest in the big leagues of painting, and has a solid background as an athlete and golfer. And, perhaps, could qualify for a banker without too much trouble.

Twaalfskill's recent inter-club triumph over Wiltwyck was certified by two guys under a shower who had failed to turn in winning cards. Earlier a Wiltwyck win was reported. The late returns caused Tom Danaher to quip:

"What did Floyd Flint do, grab a couple of points out of Montrepose in the late rush?"

Premier Sounds Confident Note

Tehran, Iran, July 28 (AP) — Premier Mohammed Mossadegh last night promised "exploitation of Iran's oil resources," indicating confident hopes of a settlement with Britain that would end the crippling blockade of this near bankrupt nation's chief money maker.

As the premier spoke to Parliament at the height of new popularity, the newspaper Bakhtar Emrooz, which often reflects his views, hinted to the Shah that he should never stand in the way of the Nationalists if he wants to avoid being dusted like Egypt's ex-King Farouk.

Mossadegh's plan for exploiting Iran's oil riches was part of a program for drastic reforms to lift the country from its present economic plight. His program called also for higher taxes, land reforms, and work projects for the unemployed—measures which are bound to be opposed by many wealthy supporters of the government.

Debate on the premier's program is scheduled to begin tomorrow.

Mossadegh was reported to have notified Britain over the weekend that Iran is willing to begin talks on compensation for the oil properties seized last year from the British. Although they were successful in ousting the British, the Iranians have failed to get around a British ban on foreign ships handling the oil.

(The new Iranian foreign minister, Hassan Navab, now in The Netherlands, told a New York Times correspondent there that his country now is willing to test its case in the oil dispute on its merits before the International Court of Justice. The court itself recently upheld a previous Iranian contention that the tribunal has no jurisdiction in the case.)

Driver Arrested After 9W Mishap

A man who gave his name as John Wright, 59, of Garden street, Poughkeepsie, was arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated after his automobile and a milk tank truck were in collision on Route 9W three miles north of Highland about 3:30 a. m. today, state police reported.

Trooper Elliott Johnson, of Highland, who investigated and made the arrest, said that Wright had stopped his automobile in the middle of the highway to clean the windshield, when it was struck in the left rear by a truck driven by William Matay of Newburgh. No personal injuries were reported.

Wright was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Albert Lester of the town of Lloyd and was granted a hearing scheduled for this afternoon.

There are approximately 4,000,000 businesses in the United States today, compared with 1,600,000 a little more than 50 years ago.

WOODSTOCK NEWS

By RICHARD E. THIBAUT, Jr.

Appearing in Woodstock Play

Papa Is All Opens Tuesday Evening

Woodstock, July 28—Papa Is All, hilarious comedy about a Pennsylvania Dutch family which looks forward to life without father, opens at the Wodstock Playhouse Tuesday, July 29, with an all-Broadway cast. Robert H. Harris, Playhouse director, stages the play, which will continue through Sunday, August 3.

In a mid-season cast shift, two additional Broadway actors have been brought to the Playhouse for major roles in this popular comedy. Playing Papa and Mama respectively are Franklyn Fox of Carousel and Rebecca, and Bess Winburn of this season's Broadway drama, One Bright Day. Arthur Storch, who arrived last week to score a hit as the "hep" collegian, will play their son Jake; Thom Carney, a Playhouse favorite, takes the role of the state trooper; and Molly Lyman, applauded in last week's Jenny Kissed Me as the housekeeper Mrs. Deazy, will play the family friend, Mrs. Yoder.

Jane Lloyd-Jones, Broadway and TV actress and popular Woodstock resident, returns for her third season at the Playhouse to play the daughter, Emma.

Unlike most comedies dealing with family life, Patterson Greene's Papa Is All tells the riotous story of how a desperate Mama, Jake and Emma begin to realize that tyrannical Papa must be removed from society. Papa, an ardent Mennonite, has religious scruples against telephones, movies, plumbing and all other pleasures and conveniences of modern life. His family's wish is quite understandable, that Papa would be "all" — a Pennsylvania Dutch expression for "gone" or "finished."

Throughout the comedy, the quaint, authentic Pennsylvania Dutch idioms color the dialogue, which will be spoken against the realistic Pennsylvania Dutch farmhouse setting designed by Margaret McDonough.

New York Times critic Brooks Atkinson describes Papa Is All as completely entertaining, a well-bred lark in a folksy style."

Apron Table Opens Thursday at Fair

Woodstock, July 28—The apron table, always one of the busiest corners of the Library Fair which will open Thursday, from 1 to 6 p. m., will feature a special new apron-dress, designed and made by Miss Therese Woodleaf Kessel, co-chairman with Mrs. Irving Brown of the apron group.

For the past few weeks Miss Kessel has been making the apron dresses to order, for the benefit of the fair, a number of them in mother-and-daughter sets, using a variety of calicoes, chintzes and plaids. Other members of the apron committee report that these new aprons, which are similar to some which are selling in New York at Fifth Avenue prices, are actually attractive and original summer frocks.

Others serving on the apron committee are Mrs. A. Benton Greene, Mrs. Kalman Hecht, Mrs. Bartow V. V. Matteson and Mrs. Charles Sheldon.

Small Things Exhibit Opens at Art Gallery

Woodstock, July 28—The fourth show of the season of the Woodstock Artists Association, a Small Things exhibit of paintings in all media, sculpture and ceramics, opened at the gallery last Saturday afternoon.

There is an engaging quality about these small paintings and sculpture, and since the size of the canvases allow for many more exhibits than usual, the range is wide. Tommy Beere's Sisters is an angular study in dramatic patterns, while Sally Jacob's Granny Dreams is an enchanting vignette. Eugene Ludkins' Chicken is a miniature gem, and Rodney Lethbridge's novel bird Conference is uniquely absorbing.

A striking wash drawing has been contributed by Karl Fortess, and in Doris Lee's Fisherwoman there is a characteristic humorous charm.

Four of the paintings and one lithograph have, with the show but two days old, been sold—Andree Ruellan's haunting and imaginative Clown, Phoebe Towbin's Happy Hours Club, Margaret Lowengrund's Retorts, Alice W. Dunbar's Paul Bunyan, and John Taylor's somberly atmospheric lithograph.

Village Notes

Woodstock, July 28—Miss Hester Miller, former Woodstocker, a well-known portrait painter, was the weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Chase at their Glasco Turnpike home.

Mrs. Barnett Byman has received a clipping from the London Evening News, dated July 17, containing a picture of Leon Barzin, Jr., upon his arrival at the London Airport. The photo of the boy bears the following caption: "Lone Flight for Leon—Little American boy looking bewildered at London Airport is two-year-old Leon Barzin, son of the chief of the New York ballet now performing at Covent Garden. He flew in to join his parents. Leon Barzin, noted conductor of the National Orchestra Association, and summer resident of this village, is on tour with the New York City ballet which recently appeared in Paris."

Miss Geraldine Jerominek celebrated her birthday Saturday with a party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Jerominek. Among the guests were Jonathan Hubbell, David Jeffrey, David Barth, Lewis Arlt, Carol and Elaine Cousins, Susie Perlman, Wendy Harriman, Donald Harriman, Barbara Carlson, Shari Kalish, Mary Margaret Shultis, Julian Ciki, Stephen Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Brock Brokenshaw, Geraldine's god-parents, Mrs. Bev. Anderson, Mrs. Jeffrey, Mrs. Robert H. Harris, Mrs. Gene Shultis and Mrs. Irving Kalish.

Half-Brothers Meet

Ogden, Utah (AP) — Two half-brothers, DeVon Worsley of Clearfield, Utah, and Jay LaVerl Worsley of Salt Lake City, met for the first time recently. The two met when Jay noticed he was working with a fellow who had the same last name as his. "Imagine how excited we were when we got to comparing notes and discovered we were half-brothers!" Jay said. "Neither of us had any other brothers or sisters." Fate, three wars and moving to another state were the events which teamed up to keep the two brothers separated. When the oldest boy, Jay, was still a youngster, his parents separated and his father moved to Idaho. It was there that DeVon, the younger boy, was born from a second marriage. Jay served a four-year hitch in the airborne infantry during World War II. DeVon returned from Korea and Japan recently after four years with the paratroopers. The father, John Harold Worsley, a World War I disabled veteran, has spent the last 15 years in the Colorado veterans hospital.

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A HORSE—Thoroughbreds in training never find life dull or uninteresting. Here a runner at New Jersey's Monmouth Park is shown in various phases of a day's activity. Up at 6 a.m., he blows out through the stretch, is rubbed down after the work. He revels in a roll in the sand, has his noon meal with the puppies, enjoys a quiet rest in his stall while awaiting the afternoon post time. (NEA)

The Freeman Hole-in-One tournament gratefull acknowledges receipt of a Newburgh entry. It comes from Wesley F. "Bo" Gill, pundit and itinerant golfer, who serves as sports editor of the Newburgh News in his spare moments.

Mr. Gill, who scored two aces at the Central Valley Golf Club, is a three-handicap star at the Wallkill Prison Golf Club.

A representative field with entries recruited from Wiltwyck, Twaalfskill, Woodstock and Shawangunk will try for the elusive ace next Sunday on the specially-constructed hole at Wiltwyck Golf Club. Tom Danaher, the club pro, and Homer Van Aken have done a nice job on this picturesque layout, a 135-yard drop shot that will be a fine test of iron accuracy. Shifting winds, if they develop, will make this a mighty interesting challenge for Mr. and Mrs. Golfer.

Folks seem surprised when you tell them that in three years of the Freeman tournament nobody has holed out for an ace. The truth of the matter is that Jim Dwyer's 2 feet ½-inch effort in the 1949 inaugural at Twaalfskill stands as the tournament record. The hole-in-one remains the luckiest yet most elusive achievement in golf. We should know.

In all the excitement about the department's ace—and those kind people in Woodstock certainly favored us with a royal celebration—the most amusing sidelight was Bob Browning's comment that: "After many years of careful preparation, the sports editor dropped a hole-in-one." How nice, Bob, but it was still more like the blind pig stumbling onto the acorn.

• The Nineteenth Hole:

Art Organtini and Ike Trowbridge are gratified by the enthusiastic response to recent "men's nights" at Wiltwyck. Dubby Raichle's popular victory in the Father Herdegen Memorial has vaulted him into the favorite's role for the 1952 Wiltwyck Club championship. Perhaps you see it that way, too, but isn't Bob Daley of Wiltwyck just about the most under-rated golfer in the city? He has turned in consistently fine scores for two years, was a standout in the Herdegen tournament, and would be even tougher if he had the opportunity to practice frequently. Leave it to Dr. Fred Holcomb, Jr., to bring out the best in the opposition. He recently posted his all-time best at Wiltwyck—a par 70—but lost to Dubby Raichle's brilliant 69. When Bill Van Aken set the amateur course record of 67 a couple of years ago, Fred played something like a dozen consecutive par holes and lost ground! Dr. Douw Meyers' new sartorial sensation—the cut-away-snirt—was quickly copied by Charles J. Turck. Our own Jack Crawford, the roving reporter, is experiencing the growing pains of the illusory "80." Boyer Gonzales, who swears by the golf of Texas, is leading the ladder tournament at Woodstock and has turned in several outstanding rounds of late.

Eugene Speicher, Woodstock portraitist, recently told us of an amazing incident that happened to him several years ago at the Masters tournament in Atlanta. It was interesting since it coincided with our own pre-introduction appraisal of the famous artist.

It seems that Speicher was sitting around batting the breeze with a flock of the big name pros in the Masters clubhouse when Ky Laffoon, the great middle west star of a decade ago, posed a question.

"And what do you do for a living, Speicher?" he asked.

"Why, I'm an artist," replied Speicher in a matter of fact tone.

"You a painter?" was Laffoon's incredulous reply. "Why, I thought you were a big business man or banker."

That's the same way we—and countless others—have sized up Eugene Speicher before the introductions. But he remains one of the greatest in the big leagues of painting, and has a solid background as an athlete and golfer. And, perhaps, could qualify for a banker without too much trouble.

Twaalfskill's recent inter-club triumph over Wiltwyck was certified by two guys under a shower who had failed to turn in winning cards. Earlier a Wiltwyck win was reported. The late returns caused Tom Danaher to quip:

"What did Floyd Flint do, grab a couple of points out of Montrepose in the late rush?"

Flint quickly denied the charges.

Golf is a game where trying to do something in one stroke where two are needed generally leads to three.

The New England Tennis Patrons Association gave the New England LTA several tennis kits containing 24 racquets for use in the free tennis clinics conducted by the New England body.

Billy Loes, rookie pitching ace of the Brooklyn Dodgers, hurled five no-hitters for Bryant High School in Queens, N. Y.

Premier Sounds Confident Note

Tehran, Iran, July 28 (AP) — Premier Mohammed Mossadegh last night promised "exploitation of Iran's oil resources," indicating confident hopes of a settlement with Britain that would end the crippling blockade of this near bankrupt nation's chief money maker.

As the premier spoke to Parliament at the height of new popularity, the newspaper Bakhtar Emrooz, which often reflects his views, hinted to the Shah that he should never stand in the way of the Nationalists if he wants to avoid being dusted like Egypt's ex-King Farouk.

Mossadegh's plan for exploiting Iran's oil riches was part of a program for drastic reforms to lift the country from its present economic plight. His program called also for higher taxes, land reforms, and work projects for the unemployed—measures which are bound to be opposed by many wealthy supporters of the government.

Debate on the premier's program is scheduled to begin tomorrow.

Mossadegh was reported to have notified Britain over the weekend that Iran is willing to begin talks on compensation for the oil properties seized last year from the British. Although they were successful in ousting the British, the Iranians have failed to get around a British ban on foreign ships handling the oil.

(The new Iranian foreign minister, Hassan Navab, now in The Netherlands, told a New York Times correspondent there that his country now is willing to test its case in the oil dispute on its merits before the International Court of Justice. The court itself recently upheld a previous Iranian contention that the tribunal has no jurisdiction in the case.)

Driver Arrested After 9W Mishap

A man who gave his name as John Wright, 59, of Garden street, Poughkeepsie, was arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated after his automobile and a milk tank truck were in collision on Route 9W three miles north of Highland about 3:30 a. m. today, state police reported.

Trooper Elliott Johnson, of Highland, who investigated and made the arrest, said that Wright had stopped his automobile in the middle of the highway to clean the windshield, when it was struck in the left rear by a truck driven by William Matay of Newburgh. No personal injuries were reported.

Wright was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Albert Lester of the town of Lloyd and was granted a hearing scheduled for this afternoon.

There are approximately 4,000,000 businesses in the United States today, compared with 1,600,000 a little more than 50 years ago.

WOODSTOCK NEWS

By RICHARD E. THIBAUT, Jr.

Appearing in Woodstock Play

Papa Is All Opens Tuesday Evening

Woodstock, July 28—Papa Is All, hilarious comedy about a Pennsylvania Dutch family which looks forward to life without father, opens at the Wodstock Playhouse Tuesday, July 29, with an all-Broadway cast. Robert H. Harris, Playhouse director, stages the play, which will continue through Sunday. August 3.

In a mid-season cast shift, two additional Broadway actors have been brought to the Playhouse for major roles in this popular comedy. Playing Papa and Mama respectively are Franklyn Fox of Carousel and Rebecca, and Bess Winburn of this season's Broadway drama, One Bright Day. Arthur Storch, who arrived last week to score a hit as the "hep" collegian, will play their son Jake; Thom Carney, a Playhouse favorite, takes the role of the state trooper; and Molly Lyman, applauded in last week's Jenny Kissed Me as the housekeeper Mrs. Deazy, will play the family friend, Mrs. Yoder.

Jane Lloyd-Jones, Broadway and TV actress and popular Woodstock resident, returns for her third season at the Playhouse to play the daughter, Emma.

Unlike most comedies dealing with family life, Patterson Greene's Papa Is All tells the riotous story of how a desperate Mama, Jake and Emma begin to realize that tyrannical Papa must be removed from society. Papa, an ardent Mennonite, has religious scruples against telephones, movies, plumbing and all other pleasures and conveniences of modern life. His family's wish is quite understandable, that Papa would be "all" — a Pennsylvania Dutch expression for "gone" or "finished."

Throughout the comedy, the quaint, authentic Pennsylvania Dutch idioms color the dialogue, which will be spoken against the realistic Pennsylvania Dutch farmhouse setting designed by Margaret McDonough.

Apron Table Opens Thursday at Fair

Woodstock, July 28—The apron table, always one of the busiest corners of the Library Fair which will open Thursday, from 1 to 6 p. m., will feature a special new apron-dress, designed and made by Miss Therese Woodleaf Kessel, co-chairman with Mrs. Irving Brown of the apron group.

For the past few weeks Miss Kessel has been making the apron dresses to order, for the benefit of the fair, a number of them in mother-and-daughter sets, using a variety of calicoes, chintzes and plaids. Other members of the apron committee report that these new aprons, which are similar to some which are selling in New York at Fifth Avenue prices, are actually attractive and original summer frocks.

Others serving on the apron committee are Mrs. A. Benton Greene, Mrs. Kalman Hecht, Mrs. Bartow V. V. Matteson and Mrs. Charles Sheldon.

Small Things Exhibit Opens at Art Gallery

Woodstock, July 28—The fourth show of the season of the Woodstock Artists Association, a Small Things exhibit of paintings in all media, sculpture and ceramics, opened at the gallery last Saturday afternoon.

There is an engaging quality about these small paintings and sculpture, and since the size of the canvases allow for many more exhibits than usual, the range is wide. Tommy Beere's Sisters is an angular study in dramatic patterns, while Sally Jacob's Granny Dreams is an enchanting vignette. Eugene Ludkins' Chicken is a miniature gem, and Rodney Lethbridge's novel bird Conference is uniquely absorbing.

A striking wash drawing has been contributed by Karl Fortess, and in Doris Lee's Fisherwoman there is a characteristic humorous charm.

Four of the paintings and one lithograph have, with the show but two days old, been sold—Andree Ruellan's haunting and imaginative Clown, Phoebe Towbin's Happy Hours Club, Margaret Lowengrund's Retorts, Alice W. Dunbar's Paul Bunyan, and John Taylor's somberly atmospheric lithograph.

Village Notes

Woodstock, July 28—Miss Hester Miller, former Woodstocker, a well-known portrait painter, was the weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Chase at their Glasco Turnpike home.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Arndt entertained at a buffet supper Saturday evening.

Mrs. Barnett Byman has received a clipping from the London Evening News, dated July 17, containing a picture of Leon Barzin, Jr., upon his arrival at the London Airport. The photo of the boy bears the following caption: "Lone Flight for Leon—Little American boy looking bewildered at London Airport is two-year-old Leon Barzin, son of the chief of the New York ballet now performing at Covent Garden. He flew in to join his parents. Leon Barzin, noted conductor of the National Orchestra Association, and summer resident of this village, is on tour with the New York City ballet which recently appeared in Paris."

Miss Geraldine Jerominek celebrated her birthday Saturday with a party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Jerominek. Among the guests were Jonathan Hubbell, David Jeffrey, David Barth, Lewis Arlt, Carol and Elaine Cousins, Susie Perlman, Wendy Harriman, Donald Harriman, Barbara Carlson, Shari Kalish, Mary Margaret Shultis, Julian Ciki, Stephen Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Brock Brokenshaw, Geraldine's god-parents, Mrs. Bev. Anderson, Mrs. Jeffrey, Mrs. Robert H. Harris, Mrs. Gene Shultis and Mrs. Irving Kalish.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mosher were the weekend guests of Mr. Mosher's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Mosher.

Boy Gets Citation

New York (AP) — A 9-year-old boy received a citation recently for his alertness in summoning aid in a Boston hotel fire. Police Commissioner George P. Monaghan made the presentation for the Police Athletic League. The youngster, Alfred Catal, smelled smoke and aroused his mother. Then he traced the smoke to another room and pounded on the door to arouse the occupant. When this failed he ran to get help.

Auto 'Damage Doctors'

New York (AP)—The Brooklyn High School of Automotive Trades graduated its first class in automobile damage appraisel. Twelve women were among the 52 earning certificates. They are known unofficially as "doctors of damages." Purpose of the course is to teach the methods, theory and practice of estimating collision repairs. Most students are affiliated with insurance companies or automobile repair shops.

Damaging Storm Hits River Area

A sharp thunderstorm accompanied by rain, wind and in some places by hail moved down the Hudson river late Sunday afternoon.

Reports indicated that the center of the storm moved down the east bank of the river from Rhinebeck to Poughkeepsie, veering over and causing some damage in Highland and Marlborough areas.

The Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation reported some power interruption in Ulster Park and Port Ewen areas due to direct lightning hits and limbs blown down by the wind. Damage was reported to be more extensive in Poughkeepsie and to the south. Approximately 40 telephone lines were reported in trouble in the Esopus, Ulster Park and Kingston areas, the New York Telephone Company said, but most were cleared up without undue delay.

State police at Highland reported heavy hail in that area slowed or stopped traffic for a short time.

Several trees were blown down in Marlborough about 5:30 p. m., Deputy Sheriff James Marano reported, and one of them fell against the home of Idell Brown on Western avenue, causing some damage. No hail was reported in the Marlborough area.

Over 600 Attend Tour of Old Stone Houses in Hurley

More than 600 persons attended the public inspection of the old stone houses in Hurley Friday and Saturday, it was reported today by Miss Anna DeWitt, general chairman.

Many of the visitors remained for a cafeteria supper served by the ladies of the Hurley Reformed Church. Among the visitors were two busloads from New York, as well as smaller groups from various historical societies and other organizations.

Fourteen stone houses, dating from the late 17th century, were included in the tour. Traffic during the tour was handled by deputies assigned by the Ulster County Sheriff's Office. Committee members said they were well pleased with the attendance and considered the tour a success.

Get Vacation Benefits

New York (AP)—More than 395,000 workers in the men's clothing industry throughout the country received 40 million dollars in vacation benefits under agreements between employers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, CIO. The entire industry, engaged in the manufacture of men's and boys' garments, shirts, underwear and related items shut down for two weeks recently before starting on fall and winter lines.

Vienna (AP)—Hungary's Communists are unhappy because workers buy trumpets instead of books. The newspaper Magyar Nemzet reported recently that every nationalized factory has funds set aside for the purchase of Communist books and literature. But the paper complained: "In the Soroksar textile works, they preferred to buy football equipment, instead of books. Trumpets were bought with the funds of the stocking factory at Pesterzsebet."

DESERTED CITY—A lone woman walks across one of Rome's main thoroughfares without worrying a bit about the usually teeming traffic. The reason for the wide open spaces is a terrific heat wave that caused Rome to be a "deserted city" as Romans stayed indoors or flocked to seaside resorts to escape the city's oven-like heat.

ANTI-KIDNAP DEFENSE—West Berlin police have erected steel road barriers at 119 crossing points along the city's East-West border to prevent further kidnaping raids by East German Communist agents. Reds had boasted nothing could stop them if they wanted to "get" any Western agent. Above, a West German policeman supervises laborers erecting one of the barricades on an American sector street. said he will forward the protest to CIO and United Steelworkers President Philip Murray.

Not Across Board

McLaughlin said the principal complaint stems from the fact that the wage increase is "not across the board"—giving the same increase to all workers regardless of their type of work.

The basic agreement calls for a 12½ cent an hour increase to the lowest paid classification and increases that amount by a half-cent up through 25 classifications, with the highest classification worker getting 25 cents an hour.

The strike settlement agreement gives workers an average 16½ cents boost effective last March 1 and a modified form of union shop, under which new employes have the right to withdraw from the union and old employes not members may stay out.

Basic terms for settling the 55-day-old strike were agreed on at the White House Thursday and ratified by the steelworkers' wage-policy committee the next day.

Details Worked Out

Details are being worked out in a companion strike of 23,000 iron ore workers. They were granted almost a similar package.

And the steel companies got from the government the right to raise prices an average of $5.65 a ton. The present price for carbon steel, the basic grade, averages about $110 a ton.

The order authorizing industry to boost its prices is expected momentarily. A detailed price schedule will be made public later.

But the union-industry settlement didn't hit a proper chord with Economic Stabilizer Roger L. Putnam. In a letter to Price Director Ellis Arnall he accused the steel industry of having held a loaded gun at the government's head to get an "unjustified price increase."

Meanwhile, various plants throughout the nation began moving slowly but without any hitches towards production.

It will be at least a week yet before full steel production starts rolling from the 380 hungry steel mills across the nation.

compels me to relate part of the case history of this defendant and a few others and to make some recommendations for the amendment of the law regarding the discharge, release and parole of psychotics."

Judge Streit then pointed out that as long ago as 1945 Peakes was diagnosed as suffering from severe dementia Praecox, a form of insanity in which the patient withdraws from reality.

Peakes, at the time, was in the air force overseas. He was discharged a few months later because of a severe psychosis.

"He received no further treatment whatever for his mental disease, from September, 1945, until the day of his arrest," Judge Streit continued. "However, he kept in touch with the veterans administration * * *."

'Fraught With Danger'

Streit said doctors found Peakes' future "bleak and fraught with danger."

Added the judge:

"By his own admission, he was ready to shoot and kill three professors at Columbia University. Only by the grace of God were their lives saved.

"The underlying cause of the death of Eileen Fahey is the negligence of the officials who failed to take heed that the prognosis was fraught with danger and that the picture was bleak.

"No institution, state or federal, is justified in releasing, discharging or paroling an insane person with a predisposition to criminal, assaultive or homicidal tendencies.

"Nor is the Peakes case some isolated error of judgment. The records of this court are replete with case after case of released incompetents resorting to crimes of violence.

"* * * I have no doubt that there are thousands of such discharged and paroled lunatics at large. It is just a question of time as to when and where some of them may explode."

While their automobile was stopped, an east-bound vehicle driven by Thomas Barron, 24, of Binghamton collided with the rear of the Wright car, spinning it around and throwing the Lehtonens, who were in the rear seat, out on the pavement, according to the seriff's office report as related by a staff member of The Binghamton Press. Slightly more than one-twentieth of an inch of rain fell during the 20 minute storm.

Damaging Storm Hits River Area

A sharp thunderstorm accompanied by rain, wind and in some places by hail moved down the Hudson river late Sunday afternoon.

Reports indicated that the center of the storm moved down the east bank of the river from Rhinebeck to Poughkeepsie, veering over and causing some damage in Highland and Marlborough areas.

The Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation reported some power interruption in Ulster Park and Port Ewen areas due to direct lightning hits and limbs blown down by the wind. Damage was reported to be more extensive in Poughkeepsie and to the south. Approximately 40 telephone lines were reported in trouble in the Esopus, Ulster Park and Kingston areas, the New York Telephone Company said, but most were cleared up without undue delay.

State police at Highland reported heavy hail in that area slowed or stopped traffic for a short time.

Several trees were blown down in Marlborough about 5:30 p. m., Deputy Sheriff James Marano reported, and one of them fell against the home of Idell Brown on Western avenue, causing some damage. No hail was reported in the Marlborough area.

Over 600 Attend Tour of Old Stone Houses in Hurley

More than 600 persons attended the public inspection of the old stone houses in Hurley Friday and Saturday, it was reported today by Miss Anna DeWitt, general chairman.

Many of the visitors remained for a cafeteria supper served by the ladies of the Hurley Reformed Church. Among the visitors were two busloads from New York, as well as smaller groups from various historical societies and other organizations.

Fourteen stone houses, dating from the late 17th century, were included in the tour. Traffic during the tour was handled by deputies assigned by the Ulster County Sheriff's Office. Committee members said they were well pleased with the attendance and considered the tour a success.

Streit said doctors found Peakes' future "bleak and fraught with danger."

Added the judge:

"By his own admission, he was ready to shoot and kill three professors at Columbia University. Only by the grace of God were their lives saved.

"The underlying cause of the death of Eileen Fahey is the negligence of the officials who failed to take heed that the prognosis was fraught with danger and that the picture was bleak.

"No institution, state or federal, is justified in releasing, discharging or paroling an insane person with a predisposition to criminal, assaultive or homicidal tendencies.

"Nor is the Peakes case some isolated error of judgment. The records of this court are replete with case after case of released incompetents resorting to crimes of violence.

"* * * I have no doubt that there are thousands of such discharged and paroled lunatics at large. It is just a question of time as to when and where some of them may explode."

Thrown to Pavement

While their automobile was stopped, an east-bound vehicle driven by Thomas Barron, 24, of Binghamton collided with the rear of the Wright car, spinning it around and throwing the Lehtonens, who were in the rear seat, out on the pavement, according to the seriff's office report as related by a staff member of The Binghamton Press. Barron was apparently unhurt, according to the report.

A weather bureau spokesman said the line squall was caused by the extremely rapid turnover of low-lying moist and warm air and a high dry and cold front that appeared suddenly about 5,000 feet above the ground.

Slightly more than one-twentieth of an inch of rain fell during the 20 minute storm.

hostelry that has numbered the nobility of Europe as its guests through the years. According to railroad officialdom, the station at Highmount is the highest point on the New York Central System, and old Rip Van Winkle may well have rubbed his eyes in amazement as the long train and its diesel locomotives drummed its way to the top of the high point of the Catskills.

Arriving at Stamford, the excursionists were welcomed by the Stamford High School band, and an exchange of greetings were held between the Mayors of Stamford and Kingston. Citizens of Stamford lined the tracks and the station platform to greet the rail-visitors, and cars and buses were provided by the people of the Catskill mountain village to take the visitors around Stamford and local points of interest.

Following the Stamford stopover, the Rip Van Winkle Flyer began its trip back to Kingston, and as in the "good old days" when many passengers rode the trains of the mountain line, blue smoke enshrouded the train as it rolled down Grand Hotel mountain with its brake-shoes dragging against the wheels to guard against any run-aways on the steep descent.

The train rolled back into Kingston about 9 p. m. and judging from comments heard from its passengers, the trip into the haunts of Rip Van Winkle had been a complete success. From the New York Central's point of view, Superintendent H. B. Tucker said that he was well-pleased with the day's event, as was William T. Gaynor—the publicity man who arranged the details of the trip and was then joined by local railroad officialdom in the presentation of the excursion.

Anti-Trumanites Go Into Office On Texans' Vote

Dallas, Tex., July 28 (AP)—More than a million Texas voters turned a political cold shoulder to Washington Saturday as they swept Gov. Allan Shivers and Price Daniel, state attorney general, back into office. Both are anti-Truman administration Democrats.

Shivers beat down the double-barrelled challenge of Austin attorney Ralph Yarborough, backed by the pro-Truman faction of the state Democratic party, and Mrs. Allene Traylor, San Antonio housewife. Incomplete returns gave him 672,459 votes to 395,802 for Yarborough, who conceded. Mrs. Traylor polled only 29,863.

Daniel, besieged by Rep. Lindley Beckworth, regarded as a Truman administration favorite, and E. W. Mapier, an unknown Wichita Falls attorney, went into office handily as the successor to colorful U. S. Sen. Tom Connally. A Sunday night count gave him 736,844 to 234,208 for Beckworth and 72,947 for Napier.

The voting was in the Democratic primary in which nomination usually means election in heavily-Democratic Texas.

Outlook Uncertain

The primary results and precinct meetings Saturday left the state Democratic outlook as uncertain as it has been. Another battle between state party factions over the binding of presidential electors to national party nominees seemed a sure thing for the September state convention.

Meanwhile, it appeared Martin Dies, original chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, faced a runoff with former Lieut. Gov. John Lee Smith of Lubbock for congressman-at-large. Dies held a majority until early Sunday night then Smith edged into the picture. The latest tabulation showed Dies with 48.24 per cent of the vote among the seven candidates.

Shivers led the anti-Truman Texas delegation to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago last week.

Also returned to Washington in the balloting were veteran Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn and Reps. Wright Patman of Texarkana, Wingate Lucas of Grapevine, O. Clark Fisher of San Angelo, and W. R. (Bob) Poage of Waco.

Critically Ill

Sen. Brien McMahon (D-Conn.) (above), 48, chairman of the Senate-House Atomic committee, lay critically ill in Washington's Georgetown Hospital. He went to the hospital in June with a spinal ailment and has failed to rally from an operation.

Two Cars Are Damaged At Abeel and Wurts

Regina Reis, 25, of Port Ewen, stopped her 1950 sedan for a traffic light at Abeel and Wurts streets at 8 a. m. Sunday and was struck in the rear by a vehicle operated by Buddy Wecker, 1495 Pophan avenue, New York, according to local police.

The Reis car received damages to the trunk lid, rear fenders, bumpers and tail pipe, it was reported, and the Wecker car had a damaged grill, front bumper, hood, headlight and windshield.

Recovers From Fire

Orleans Mass. (AP)—Less than five months after fire razed the Snow Library here destroying 9,600 books, there are now more books available for borrowing than before the fire. After word of the loss spread, offers of help and book contributions began to pour in from church, school, civic and veterans organizations, newspapers and book companies. Book contributions and messages came from all over the United States and also from Africa and Hawaii. Temporary location for the library was obtained in a nearby frame house. Volunteers repainted and redecorated the structure. Miss Ruth L. Barnard, the librarian, says the library lacks books in only a few categories such as travel, navigation and the sea, biography and more volumes on Cape Cod.

Michelangelo considered himself chiefly a sculptor, although he is equally famous for sculpture and painting.

Recovers From Fire

Orleans Mass. (AP)—Less than five months after fire razed the Snow Library here destroying 9,600 books, there are now more books available for borrowing than before the fire. After word of the loss spread, offers of help and book contributions began to pour in from church, school, civic and veterans organizations, newspapers and book companies. Book contributions and messages came from all over the United States and also from Africa and Hawaii. Temporary location for the library was obtained in a nearby frame house. Volunteers repainted and redecorated the structure. Miss Ruth L. Barnard, the librarian, says the library lacks books in only a few categories such as travel, navigation and the sea, biography and more volumes on Cape Cod.

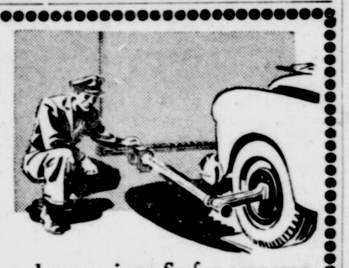

Michelangelo considered himself chiefly a sculptor, although he is equally famous for sculpture and painting.
